450,000 Idle In Strikes as Lack of Coal Shuts Plants

Operations Drop To Record Low at Pittsburgh; Mass. Bus Lines Resume

By the Associated Press

Forces inactive because of labor disputes reached 450,000 yesterday, about same as last week's total. Major industries affected:

COAL—Operators meet again after collapse of Government conferences: 216,000 miners out in six States; Southeastern cotton production menaced by continuance of strike.

STEEL—Carnegie-Illinois furloughs 15,000, shuts down more furnaces for lack of coal; Pittsburgh operations lowest in more than decade; 30,000 may be laid off in Chicago-Gary mills.

TRANSPORTATION—Commonwealth of Massachusetts operates bus and trolley lines for one million daily riders after three-day strike of AFL employes.

SHIPPING—Insurgent longshoremen heckle AFL strikers returning to wharves in world's busiest port, New York; union estimates 5000 to 7000 of 35,000 members back on job; Harry Bridges, CIO leader, blamed for rift in AFL ranks.

LUMBER—CIO workers reopen three plants closed in strike of 61,000 AFL mill hands in Pacific Northwest; AFL reports new wage agreements reached in 17 plants since strike started; operators and representatives of 40,000 CIO lumber workers resume negotiations.

MOTION PICTURES—Two injured, one arrested in renewal of disorders at Warner Brothers Studio in Hollywood; Eric Johnston, new industry official, confers with contesting AFL factions in effort to end long strike.

More mine walkouts and resulting steel furnace shutdowns helped to swell the total of idle.

Another factor that kept the total up was failure of a back-to-work call among AFL longshoremen in New York, with only a fraction of the 35,000 strikers returning to the wharves.

CIO Strike Threatened

Meanwhile, the CIO threatened a strike of 18,000 members in New Castle County, Del., unless there is a peaceful settlement of the five-week strike at the National Vulcanized Fibre Co., invovling 700 persons. Such a strike would shut down or cripple a variety of industries and affect 125,000 residents of Wilmington and nearby communities.

CIO United Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers at National Fibre asserted the company failed to negotiate a new contract. The company said it would take no action until the workers returned.

Disorders broke out again in the prolonged motion picture dispute. Two men were injured and a third was arrested when more than 300 pickets sat in the street at Warner Brothers studio, Hollywood, and defied sheriff's officers.

Eric Johnston, new head of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, conferred with leaders of the two contesting AFL factions. The strike embraces between 3000 and 7000 motion picture workers.

Police Guard Piers

In the New York dock strike hundreds of police stood guard on the piers and officials reported conditions "normal and quiet." Hundreds of ships lay idle in the harbor waiting to be loaded or unloaded.

Leaders of the AFL Longshoremen's Union have urged members to resume work during negotiations. The dispute arose over omission of a provision covering size of cargo net loads from a proposed new contract.

Under State control, buses rolled again in nearly all the 71 Massachusetts cities and towns deprived of service by a three-day strike of 1800 AFL employes of the Eastern Massachusetts Street Railway.

The walkout, over wage demands, had disrupted bus and trolley transportation along the eastern edge of Massachusetts from New Hamp-

'House Seats Too Hard,' Rep. Bennet Complains

By the Associated Press

Representative Bennett (R., Mo.), wants more comfortable seats for Congressmen in the House chamber.

"It is about time these hard benches were declared surplus and turned over to some prison or museum specializing in primitive instruments of torture and some decent seats, at least as comfortable as those in the gallery, provided," he complained in yesterday's Congressional Record.

"If this could be done, maybe members would stay in their seats and the decorum of the House would improve."

Oil Firm Fee Figures in Tideland Bill

Measure Renouncing U. S. Claims 'Blessed' By Calif. Lessees

By Edward A. Harris
Washington Bureau of the St. Louis Post-Dispatch

The controversial legislation that would renounce all claim of the Federal Government to billions of dollars' worth of oil in the Nation's tidelands was codrafted by a special assistant attorney general of the State of California whose fee is to be paid in part by oil firms with a tremendous financial stake in the legislation.

The special assistant is William W. Clary, who helped draft the measure in consultation with his superior, Attorney General Robert W. Kenny, and with other attorneys general and port authorities throughout the country. Kenny said he submitted the draft to California oil firms and other tidelands lessees before it was brought to the Capital by Clary for introduction in Congress.

Called "Shotgun" Legislation

These facts were uncovered by the Post-Dispatch in an inquiry into the behind-the-scenes struggle of powerful forces for lasting control of the oil-rich tidelands, forces which have remained largely out of the public limelight in the concerted effort to pass the "shotgun" legislation on Congressional Hill.

Known as Joint Resolution 225, and described by some critics as a plunder of the national domain unequalled since Teapot Dome, the legislation was adopted by the House on September 20, with only 11 dissenting votes. It is now before the Senate Judiciary Committee. At stake are more than 65,000 square miles of tidelands containing what has been described as the country's greatest unexploited source of petroleum, an area which the coastal States have claimed for

Dutch Pledge Self-Rule For Java Natives

Amsterdam, Oct. 16 (AP).—The Netherlands Minister of Overseas Territory today declared that the government was ready to offer Indonesians self-government within the Dutch commonwealth, as a solution to the nationalist uprising in Java.

The Minister, Dr. H. A. Logemann, told the Dutch lower house that the government was willing to discuss the proposal with Indonesian leaders "who merit consideration," but would not deal with Dr. Soekarno, President of the "Indonesian Republic."

Deny War Declaration

Logemann blamed some of the troubles in Java on failure of the combined chiefs of staff to make adequate plans either for the Netherlands, or for other Allied powers, to take over the occupation and administration of the East Indies directly after the Japanese capitulation.

(The "Indonesian Republic," in a broadcast over the free Indonesian radio, denied that it had declared war on the Netherlands, and asserted that foreign agents were attempting to discredit its aims.)

A Batavia dispatch distributed by the Dutch news agency, Aneta, said Dr. Soekarno had expressed willingness to come to an agreement with the Dutch.

Assails Allies

Logemann said the government flatly refused to talk with Soekarno, because he "had identified himself so completely with the Japanese regime and is completely hostile toward the Netherlands."

He said the Allied plans provided "barely room" for shipping Dutch troops to Australia for training and that after Japan's collapse "even demobilization appeared to have priority over liberation measures for our territory in the Orient."

Halsey Asserts Alert U. S. Best Hero Memorial

Fleet Commander Thanks San Francisco For Hearty Welcome

San Francisco, Oct. 16 (AP).—Admiral Halsey told a welcoming crowd at the City Hall here today: "An America that stands whole, untouched and ready to take the lead in solving the immense problems confronting the world is the best monument you can erect to the men who fought and died to keep her that way."

The commander of the Third Fleet spoke to an assemblage after sailors from the mighty ships had paraded up historic Market st. The audience included Gov. Earl Warren of California and Mayor Roger Lapham of San Francisco.

The text of Halsey's remarks:

"Thank you Mr. Governor and Mr. Mayor—for a welcome that gladdens the hearts of all of us, whether we're San Franciscans, West Coast men, or from the States beyond the Rockies.

Not Place for Speech

"I am not going to try to make a speech, here and now, because this isn't the time or place for it. Those thousand young men over there—the boys with the battle stars on their ribbons—want to get along, and tread this good American earth again. It's been a long time for most of them, so I don't think I'll engage in any 'holding operations' with them at this stage of the game. It mightn't be healthy!

"I just want to tell you—on behalf of the officers and men of the Third Fleet—that moving along Market st. a few minutes ago was like parading up all the Main streets in the country. It was really coming home.

"And I can tell you that we thought a lot about coming home during these past years at sea. Home is what we were fighting for

Atom Power Scientists To Get Hearing

House Committee Approves Reopening On Bill Tomorrow; Calls Witnesses

By Robert C. Albright
Post Staff Writer

The House Military Committee yesterday in an abrupt turnabout voted, 15 to 9, to reopen hearings on the Administration's May-Johnson bill clamping stringent domestic controls on use and development of atomic power.

Chairman Andrew J. May (D., Ky.), whose committee closed hearings last week after one day of testimony, and was planning to speed a revised bill to the House floor, ordered hearings reopened tomorrow.

Scientists Protested

Two groups of scientists who worked on the atomic bomb at Oak Ridge, Tenn., and at the University of Chicago, last week protested hasty action on the measure and asked a hearing. May invited each group to select a spokesman to appear tomorrow. He said one or two other atom scientists will be heard before the committee resumes executive sessions on the legislation Friday.

In the Senate the legislation had run into a similar slow-down, after a floor wrangle over what committee should consider it. The McMahon resolution, creating a special nine-man Senate committee to receive the bill and study all phases of atomic power, is apparently all set for Senate clearance tomorrow.

U. S. Stands Alone

There were these other developments before the Senate's Joint Military-Commerce Subcommittee, holding hearings on a proposed national science foundation:

1. Rear Admiral William R. Purnell, ranking naval expert on atomic bombs, testified that the United States now is the only nation industrially equipped to manufacture the bomb. He said not even Great Britain, which with Canada shares the secret with the United States, is industrially geared to produce the bomb at this time.

2. Secretary of the Navy James V. Forrestal supported proposals for a national science foundation, but suggested that military research be carried on separately from industrial research to preserve secrecy. He urged that at least 20 per cent of any funds allotted for scientific training and research be earmarked for military use. If there is another war, he said it will "probably come at such speed that we will not have the breathing space that we had this time for the development of weapons and countermeasures.

3. Senator Harley M. Kilgore (D., W. Va.) told the committee President Truman favors one-man control of the proposed science foundation. Kilgore said the President had approved a letter from Budget Director Harold D. Smith to the subcommittee saying one administrator with an advisory board was desirable.

Predicting no other country can make an atomic bomb in "quite a stretch of time," Admiral Purnell testified that the United States still holds a number of atomic energy "trade secrets."

"Britain first has got to make its machinery modern before making

Calls Charges 'Misleading'

Eisenhower Defends Handling Of Jews in Letter to Truman

By Edward T. Folliard
Post Staff Writer

Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, in a letter made public at the White House yesterday, said the charge that American soldiers were substituting for Nazi SS troops to guard Jews in German concentration camps was "definitely misleading."

General Eisenhower's letter to President Truman was dated October 8, and was in reply to a sensational report made to the Chief Executive by Earl G. Harrison, U. S. representative on the Inter-Governmental Committee on Refugees.

Harrison, who visited Germany in July, told Mr. Truman that American authorities in Germany appeared "to be treating the Jews as the Nazis treated them except that we do not exterminate them." He said the Jews were held in concentration camps in large numbers under American military guard.

General Eisenhower, from his headquarters in Germany, said that Harrison gave "little regard" to the fact that the lives of thousands of Jews and other prisoners had been saved.

"At the time of Mr. Harrison's report there were perhaps 1000 Jews still in their former concentration camps," Eisenhower wrote. "These were too sick to be moved at that time. No Jewish or other displaced persons have been housed in these places longer than was absolutely necessary for medical quarantine and recovery from acute illness. It has always been our practice, not just our policy, to remove these victims with the utmost speed from concentration camps.

"The assertion that our military guards are now substituting for SS troops," Eisenhower continued, "is definitely misleading. One reason for limiting the numbers permitted to leave our assembly centers was depredation and banditry by displaced persons themselves. Despite all precautions, more than 2000 of them died from drinking methylated alcohol and other types of poisonous liquor. Many others died by violence or were injured while circulating outside our assembly centers."

Cites Progress Made

"Mr. Harrison's report," Eisenhower told the President, "gives little regard to the problems faced, the real success attained in saving the lives of thousands Jewish and other concentration camp victims and repatriating those who could and wished to be repatriated, and the progress made in two months to bring these unfortunates who remained under our jurisdiction from the depths of physical degeneration to a condition of health and essential comfort. I have personally been witness to the expressed gratitude of many of these people for these things."

General Eisenhower, who had been instructed by President Truman to requisition German civilian homes to billet Jews and other displaced persons, said in his letter that nearly all Jews now have more floor space than is required for our soldiers.

This was the case, he said, despite a housing shortage that was not merely acute, "but desperate." The general pointed out that this winter the villages and towns in the U. S. Zone in Germany would be required to "house more than twice their normal population." A million and a half Germans, he said, had fled to southwestern Germany to escape the Allied air attacks.

152,000 From Austria

In addition there were some 600,000 Germans or German sympathizers who had come from Poland, Czechoslovakia and Yugoslavia. On top of all this, General Eisenhower reported, the U. S. Zone is under orders to absorb 152,000 more Germans from Aus-

Berlin Government Dominated By German Reds, 'Ike' Reports

The Communist Party of Germany now dominates Berlin's city government, General Eisenhower reported yesterday. He added that informal reports indicate it could not retain that position in "a fair and impartially supervised election."

Eisenhower, in an occupational report made public by the War Department, said such an election would "reveal relatively strong support going to the Social Democrats and the Christian-Democratic Union, in that order."

Print Twice as Many Papers

All four political parties functioning in the German capital are allocated sufficient newsprint by the Soviet authorities to print 100,000 newspapers each, Eisenhower said, "except that the Communist paper is permitted to print 200,000."

"All papers," he added, "are subject to Soviet censorship."

Of the four political parties, Eisenhower said the Communists and the Social Democrats are "well organized, active and have a basis of former members on which to build."

The two others, the Christian Democrats and the Liberal Democrats, however, he said, are new and less active organizations.

Joined in Political Bloc

The report added:

"The four parties in Berlin joined, on the initiative of the Communist Party, in a united front 'political bloc' intended to unify their policies on all important matters. This joint political organization continued throughout the month under review (August) and succeeded in formulating surface uniformity on major questions, with some evidence of dissent dissatisfaction, especially on the part of the two conservative parties.

"The device of a political bloc will not be encouraged in the U. S. zone, as it runs counter to traditional American concepts of political activity and vigorous political life in a democratic sense."

Personnel Cut of Third Planned By January 1

41 Points to Free Enlisted Men Nov. 1; Is 2-Month Step-up In Demobilization

The Navy last night announced reductions in point scores for the greater part of its personnel, intended to release one third of its war-end strength by the first of January.

With further cuts predicted in December and January, the score for enlisted men will be reduced from 44 to 41 points, effective November 1.

On the same date the male officers' score will be cut from 49 to 46 points. Wave officers from 39 to 32 and Wave enlisted personnel from 29 to 26.

No change was made in the formula by which points are computed.

Means 2-Month Step-up

The new schedule steps up the Navy's demobilization plan by some two months.

The Navy announcement also said that a further reduction in point scores for medical doctors probably will be made on January 1. Reduction of doctors' scores from 60 to 53 points was announced recently. The expected further cut will be to 51 points.

In other classes the further predicted cuts are: For male officers other than doctors, to 44 points on December 1 and to 43 points on January 1.

For enlisted male personnel, to 39 points on December 1 and to 38 points on January 1.

For Wave officers, to 30 points on December 1 and 29 points on January 1.

For enlisted Waves, to 24 points on December 1 and 23 points on January 1.

To Release Married Nurses

The Navy also said yesterday that all married commissioned Navy nurses, both regular and reserved, are being released from the service.

The order, which declares the officer-nurses ineligible for retention, affects approximately 700 nurses.

Selective Service announced yesterday a plan for release of an estimated 400 conscientious objectors before the first of the year, on a basis of age and services performed.

Objectors now in civilian public service camps who are 38 or older will be released within the next 60 days, regardless of length of service, Selective Service said.

Those 35 years of age or over who have had more than two years of service are to be released by January 1.

Laborers Call For Peron As Crisis Mounts

Buenos Aires, Oct. 16 (AP).—Fifteen thousand laborers shouting slogans favoring the deposed Juan Peron paraded through the capital's business district today as the harassed Argentine government continued its attempts to form a new cabinet.

Police made no effort to interfere with the marchers and there were no disorders. Union leaders said the march was not supported by organized labor and declared that "armed men" without union affiliation forced employes to quit their jobs in suburban Avellaneda and march into the city.

The government earlier announced that Peron, former Vice President, Minister of War, and Secretary of labor, who was forced by Army leaders to quit last week, was "not being detained" but was in protective custody. No details were given.

Recall Pay Raises

While leaders of labor unions are almost all anti-Peron because Peron, while in power, named his own candidates for choice union jobs, the rank and file of labor remembers the wage increases and reduced hours which the cabinet member established for them by decree.

The overthrow of Peron, however, apparently has roused fears among labor men that the gains

OIL

many years but which the United States Government now maintains belongs to the public domain.

The Joint Resolution has the support of 46 attorneys general and has been backed by Congressional proponents voicing pious States' "rights" arguments. They have stressed the point that the States always have claimed title to the tidelands, and have warned darkly that the Federal Government is seeking to seize control of harbors and docks, shrimp and little fishes.

Little has been said about oil by these proponents, but the pungent smell of black gold emanates powerfully from the Senate and House quit claim bills. If adopted, and if signed by President Truman, this legislation would kill a test suit filed last May 29 by the Department of Justice to determine judicially the ownership of tidelands.

Attorney General Kenny and Clary have been spearheading the States' rights crusade in behalf of the legislation. A liberal and able democratic politician with strong party ties in the Nation's Capital, Kenny was approached by the Post-Dispatch and told that this newspaper has been informed the legislation was originally prepared in consultation with the major oil companies of California.

Presented Last March

He said the bills were drafted originally by himself and Clary, and presented by Clary last March to 17 House members and to Senator Pat McCarran of Nevada, chairman of the Senate Judiciary Committee and also chairman of the Judiciary Subcommittee considering the legislation. In the Senate McCarran introduced the bill given him, Kenny said (S. R. 48), and the 17 House resolutions, prepared by Kenny and Clary, later were incorporated into Joint Resolution 225 by the House Judiciary Committee with only minor changes. Hatton W. Sumners (D., Tex.) is chairman of the House committee.

He further said, in response to specific questions, that Clary is a title expert employed by the State of California on special matters, and that his fee for drafting the legislation was left unfixed with the understanding that it would be paid in part by the State and the balance by the major oil companies of the State and other tidelands lessees. This arrangement, he said, was acceptable to the oil companies and other interested parties such as title companies.

Submitted to Lessees

"Did Clary consult with these tidelands lessees in the drafting of the legislation?" Kenny was asked.

"We drafted the resolution after consulting with other State officials and port authorities," he replied candidly, "and we took the resolution, or proposed bill, around to the various tidelands lessees, including the oil companies. They studied and okayed the resolution. They may even have suggested some minor changes, but did not participate in the actual drafting of the measure."

Kenny said that it was his position that the tidelands lessees in his State had "every right in the world" to interest themselves in the legislation, since they had heavy investments in the tidelands under permits from the State, investments that are jeopardized by the clouding of the State's title caused by the Justice Department's suit.

Cites Duty of Protection

As an officer of the State, he said, it was his duty and responsibility to try to protect the State's lessees, and to consult with them in any protection activities. He pointed out that California, like other coastal States, always has claimed title to the tidelands, and said State ownership had been upheld by the courts 52 times. Royalties of from 5 to 50 per cent are paid into the State's treasury by oil companies who hold permits from the State to drill under California's tidelands. The tidelands cover the area from the low-water mark to the 3-mile limit.

He said that the State of California had advanced Clary a retainer of $500 for initial work on the legislation, with the total left unfixed. So far as he knows, he said, the oil companies of the State and other tidelands lessees have not yet contributed to the fee, but have agreed to do so after the disposition of the legislation.

In a telegram to the writer received yesterday, Clary said: "Re your telegram October 12, ever since defeat of the Nye resolution 1939, various attorneys general, attorneys for port authorities, cities and others, including lessees of States, have been concerned as to threats by Secretary Ickes to attack State ownership of lands under navigable waters. Pending legislation is sponsored by 46 attorneys general and by port authorities and numerous State and municipal officials, to put a stop to these unwarranted threats which have seriously clouded titles.

Result of Joint Efforts

"Resolution as recommended by House Judiciary Committee was result of joint efforts of Attorney General Kenny, myself, Attorney General Grover Sellers of Texas, Solicitor General Orrin Judd of New York and Leander I. Shelley, attorney for New York Port Authority and also attorney for American Association Port Authorities. Numerous other attorneys general were consulted and made suggestions.

"Copy of resolution was submitted to all 46 attorneys general who signed brief and was approved by them. Attorney General Kenny also submitted copy to some State lessees but none of them took any part in drafting of resolution.

"As to reasons for my employment, Attorney General Kenny advises me that he has given you full information. Believe these questions are utterly foreign to merits of proposed legislation and are probably suggested by opponents of legislation who are attempting to confuse issues by red herring tactics and to obscure fact that this legislation is result of Nationwide movement by attorneys general, port authorities, States and municipalities.

Employment Explained

"Nevertheless, as Attorney General Kenny has stated, reasons for my employment are well known and both he and I are glad to give you full information. For many years past I have been special counsel for Title Insurance & Trust Co. on title matters and have represented Southern California Title Association, Union Pacific and other companies involved in land litigation in southern California, and by reason of this experience was retained by Kenny to represent State of California.

"You ask if I am still special counsel on title matters for Standard Oil and Union Pacific. I presently represent Union Pacific in pending land litigation. I am not now and have never been counsel for Standard Oil Co. Union Pacific does not lease either tidelands or any other lands from the State of California.

"Information already given you by Attorney General Kenny as to financial arangements covers subject completely. Above statement has been approved by Attorney General Kenny and he requests that if you publish any part of this statement you publish entire telegram."

"Kenny, in discussing the legal aspects of the case, told the Post-Dispatch that in previous Supreme Court cases involving tidelands it was true that the United States Government was not a party to the litigation, but he insisted that the same legal question had been resolved in favor of the States in courts disputes with private litigants."

Decision One for Congress

The States cannot tolerate continual "harassment" from the Federal Government on the tidelands ownership issue, he said, and therefore it is up to the Congress to declare tidelands policy once and for all.

Kenny has been the leading spokesman for the State attorneys-general in a running verbal feud over the issue with Interior Secretary Harold L. Ickes, at whose behest former Attorney General Francis B. Biddle filed the test sult. While supporters of the pending quit-claim legislation have denied strenuously that it is designed to prevent the Supreme Court from ruling on the matter, Kenny conceded that the measures were brought to the Capital last March for introduction at that time because Ickes had become "menacing" in his threats to have a test suit filed.

Further than this, Representative Eugene E. Cox (D., Ga.), who led the floor fight for adoption of the measure on September 20, asserted at this time during debate on the bill: "The bill is made necessary because of the recent assertion of the right of Federal control made by the Department of the Interior, and in response to which suit was filed by the Attorney General against a citizen of the State of California, which cast a cloud upon a title which has never heretofore been questioned by the Government."

Designed to Establish Rights

The department's test suit was filed May 29 in the United States District Court at Los Angeles to enjoin operations of the Pacific Western Oil Corp., which is extracting oil in the Elwood oil field, off the California coast near Santa Barbara, under a State lease. It is designed to establish any rights the United States may have in petroleum deposits in coastal submerged lands lying between the low-water mark and the 3-mile limit.

This area is technically known as the "marginal sea," although by common usage it has become known as the tidelands. Legally the tideland refers to the ground between low and high-water lines, and this area was not contested by the department in the suit. But the quit-claim legislation, as passed by the House, renounced for all time any claim of the Federal Government to the section between high tide and the 3-mile limit, thus covering what is technically and legally described as both "tidelands" and the "marginal sea." The legislation is thus all-inclusive, irrespective of any legal distinction between tidelands and the marginal sea.

Filed After Resignation

The suit was filed by Biddle after President Truman had accepted his "resignation," which was requested. Biddle told a news conference that he had asked the President to think it over very carefully, and after doing so Truman had said he still wanted the suit filed.

In announcing the filing of the court action, Biddle pointed out that in 1937 the Nye resolution was passed by the Senate asserting the right of the Federal Government to submerged oil deposits within the 3-mile limit, exactly the reverse of the pending legislation. The 1937 resolution was reported favorably by a House committee, but for some reason was never voted upon by the House itself.

As far as is known, Biddle said, the largest oil-bearing submerged areas lie off the coast of California. "It has been estimated," he declared at the news conference, "that the several coastal California oil fields cover an aggregate of 2100 acres, with a reasonable oil content of 35,0000 barrels per acre, or about 73,500,000 barrels.

"Further, it has been claimed that an estimated additional 200 million barrels of recoverable oil lie in more than 5000 acres of submerged lands off the California coast. Oil also has been discovered in the Gulf of Mexico."

Favored Court Ruling

It was Biddle's position that the department did not know who was entitled to the areas in question, but that the courts should be given the opportunity of deciding the issue. Even opponents of the pending quit-claim legislation state that the United States Supreme Court, if given the chance to rule on the matter, may uphold the States, but they insist that the court should make the determination, and not Congress.

It is Kenny's contention that "the racketeering is all on the other side," that speculators in California have been promoting homesteaders' claims to tidelands in the hope that title eventually will be awarded to the Federal Government, and that these promoters have already made illicit profits by peddling such claims.

The solid fact that stands out in this gigantic struggle for the tidelands is that America's oil reserves are expected to be depleted in 14 years at the present rate of consumption. Ickes says that he wants to set aside most of the untapped oil reserves in the tidelands as emergency pools for the national defense. The States want to continue to permit private oil companies to exploit these reserves. The Nation's welfare may well be at stake.

Indo-Chinese Send Plea to Truman, Stalin

Saigon, Indo-China, Oct. 16 (AP).—French authorities today said the Viet Nam had broadcast an appeal to President Truman and Generalissimo Stalin asking representation on the United Nations Advisory Commission for Asiatics, and denouncing "the abuses of power by the British administration in south Indo-China in support of French efforts to reestablish imperialism. . . ."

The Viet Nam message, wirelessed from Hanoi and monitored by the French, charged that Annamese had been massacred by Allied personnel masquerading in Japanese uniforms. The Viet Nam is the Annamese Nationalist movement.

British Imperial Gurkas and Japanese naval personnel, meanwhile, occupied an island area which had been the scene of the heaviest attack toward Saigon by Annamese. The Nationalists suffered a severe setback Sunday night in an attack by irregulars against trained troops, and have not tried to move toward Saigon since then.

(A Paris dispatch said Admiral Georges Thierry d'Argenlieu, French high commissioner for Indo-China, had informed the French government that the Viet Nam "does not represent the views of the immense majority of the Indo-Chinese population." Officials in Paris said he reported most of the Indo-Chinese favored a return of French troops to end pillaging "which the Annamese government favored and now cannot prevent." D'Argenlieu described the situation in Saigon as "more calm.")

Courts-martial of 1000 Annamese prisoners taken by the French began today, with about 150 scheduled to be heard daily.

A British authority denied that Field Marshal Count Juichi Terauchi, commander in chief of Japanese southern armies, had even been placed under house arrest, and declared Terauchi was not to blame for native uprisings in Indo-China.

Ne wYork, Oct. 16 (INS).—An advance guard of the mighty Third Fleet arrived in New York tonight after 101 combat planes from the carriers Enterprise, Monterey and Bataan took off at sea and landed at Floyd Bennett Field.

Berge Proposes Competitions in Aluminum Field

By the Associated Press

Assitsant Attorney General Wendell Berge yesterday urged establishment of competition in the aluminumr industry "no matte what it takes."

He told members of the Senate Military Affairs, Small Business and Postwar Planning committees:

"I would suggest that the Government make it clear to industry, especially those who can and would use aluminum, that competition will be established in this industry, no matter what it takes."

He told the committee that the big consumers—automotive, railroads and housing industries—will not use enough aluminum to keep Government plants going until they are assured of multiple sources of supply. A Federal court has held that Alcoa has a monopoly on aluminum ingot production

Late Navy Figures Show 35 Dead In Okinawa Storm

Pearl Harbor, Oct. 16 (AP).—Revised Navy casualty figures issued today on the typhoon which lashed Okinawa last week showed 35 dead and 41 missing, but the Navy said these figures probably would be increased on receipt of more complete information. Ninety-one persons were seriously injured and 332 received minor injuries.

Seven ships were lost. Nineteen vessels were so badly damaged that their commanding officers consider them a total loss. An additional 34 ships suffered serious structural damage and four others minor damage. Eighty per cent of the Navy's shore establishments on Okinawa were damaged or wiped out.

the machinery that makes the bomb," said Purnell. While this modernization of machinery should take at least five years, he said it could be speeded up if Britain gets a proposed five billion loan from the United States.

The Navy witness agreed with earlier Army and science spokesmen that there is no specific counter weapon at the present time, saying: "Not more than two or three bombs are made the same. I cannot imagine anyone making bombs that would be detonated by the same countermeasure.

The Senate committee today will hear several scientists who played major roles in developing the bomb, including Dr. J. R. Oppenheimer, in charge of atomic bomb work in New Mexico; Dr. Robert Wilson, and Dr. J. H. Curtis.

Japs Designed Plane As Defense Against Superfort

Hakata, Japan, Oct. 16 (AP).—Japanese aircraft engineers designed a radically new pusher type plane in their desperate hunt for a defense against American Superfort raids.

The strange looking plane was flown only three times and never used in combat. It's creators called it "sudden lightning." Americans nicknamed it "the goose."

It was designed for speed, theoretically capable of making 476 miles an hour and maneuverability. It was heavily armored, carried four 30 caliber machine guns in the nose and was pushed by a six-bladed propeller.

"If the Japs had perfected it, its speed and heavy armor probably would have brought out the new American jet fighters to combat it," said B-29 Pilot Capt. Derrik S. Lofthouse of Detroit.

made during the 18 months Peron was in office would be erased by his successors. The government in an apparent effort to calm labor has announced officially that it would not seek to cancel any of labor's gains.

President Edelmiro Farrell, who was left in office despite Peron's ouster, so far has been unable to form a new cabinet. Civilian political leaders, demanding that he resign and turn over his powers to the Supreme Court, have refused to serve under him.

In an effort to keep the skeleton government in operation Gen. Eduardo Avalos, who raepresented the military in forcing Peron's resignation, is serving as Minister of War and interim Minister of Interior and Finance.

Admiral Hector Vernengo Lima, named Minister of the Navy after the shake-up, is acting as interim Minister of Foreign Affairs and Minister of Justice and Education.

Ousts Police Chief

Avalos, in his capacity as Minister of the Interior, today removed Col. Aristobulo Mittelbbach as the chief of the federal police, and placed Col. Emilio Ramirez in charge. Ramirez, a former police chief, was ousted sometime ago by Farrell.

Students at the National Institute decided to end their 10-day walkout and students at the Student Center University urged their members to return to classes.

Avalos, in an interview, declared the overthrow of Peron was a "revolution," but he disavowed that he had replaced the former Vice President as Argentine's "strong man."

"I am not the boss," he said. "I am carrying out the orders of the officers of the army."

Will Recognize Vote

London, Oct. 16 (INS).—Reuter dispatches from Buenos Aires declared tonight that War Minister Eduardo Avalos had promised that the Argentine government would be handed over to the political party obtaining the most votes in the elections scheduled for next April.

ment of lawful rule and the disarming of the Japanese in the Indies was the duty of the Allies, Logemann said:

"It is a serious thing that we, who in this war gave all we could, to our sorrow must say that we did not find the Allies ready and only hesitantly prepared for this common duty."

After paying tribute to the British nation, the Minister said, "We also may be allowed to remark how dangerous it was to publicize the intention of the occupying force to limit itself to the occupation of Batavia and Soerabaja and thereby giving the Soekarno regime a feeling of security in all the rest of Java

"Danger to Dutch lives," he continued, "has forced the British to remove this limitation, but the announcement already has had its evil effects."

Governor Resigns

In another development during the day, Aneta announced the government had accepted the resignation of A. W. L. Tjarda van Starkenborgh Stachouwer as governor general of the East Indies. He was imprisoned by the Japanese during the war and is now in Holland.

(A Netherlands spokesman said in London that 4000 Dutch troops now are en route to Java, as a result of a shipping agreement reached with the British. British sources also disclosed that Britain is sending one division, and perhaps two, to the Netherlands Indies. The all-India radio said a contingent of British troops had arrived in Java today.)

Former Diplomat Scores Actions of Officials Abroad

By the Associated Press

Some official American activities abroad "verge on the comic opera," a former diplomat declared today.

State Department officials in some European countries show "complete lack of understanding of the problems of the country in which they are operating and the relationship of that country to its neighbors," Representative Herter (R., Mass.) said in an interview.

The congressman, who served in the State Department two years, 1917 and 1919, was an attache of the American Embassy in Berlin in 1916, and for two months was in charge of the American Legation in Brussels, Belgium, recently returned from Europe where he surveyed relief needs at the request of the War Food Administration and consulted with diplomatic missions.

Herter declared American diplomacy in Europe is falling down on the job. The State Department, he said, is faced with lack of "clear-cut policy' in Europe and lack of adequately trained personnel to man the missions abroad.

Bar Unit Meets Today to Discuss Courthouse Annex

The Fairfax County Bar Association will hold a special meeting today at 3:30 p. m. in the Trial Justice Building to discuss construction of the proposed addition to the county courthouse.

Walter T. Oliver jr., association vice president, said yesterday recommendations on the proposed construction probably would be made as an outgrowth of today's meeting.

Planned is an addition of two wings to the west side of the courthouse, at an approximate cost of $150,000. County supervisors have agreed that space in the present county office building, erected in 1929, is inadequate. The contemplated construction would mean moving of planning commission and welfare department offices from the Trial Justice Building to the present county building, with the offices now occupied by those agencies being taken over by the police.

Presidential Citation Awarded Famed Sub

San Francisco, Oct. 16 (AP).—A Presidential Unit Citation has been awarded the USS Sealion, submarine which achieved fame in a spectacular lone night surface attack on four Japanese battleships, Twelfth Naval District headquarters announced today.

In one of the biggest kills ever credited to a single submarine, the Sealion on November 21, 1944, engaged the four Japanese battleships in the East China Sea, sinking one and seriously damaging another. It marked the first time in history that a single U. S. Navy unit of any type had sunk a Japanese battleship unassisted.

The convoy consisted of two tugs pulling four barges loaded with aviation gasoline, escorted by two American patrol craft.

FBI Charges Banker With Embezzlement

St. Louis, Oct. 16 (AP).—A federal complaint charging Erwin J. Stuckenberg, 37, assistant treasurer of the Chippewa Trust Company, with embezzlement of $270,000 of the bank's funds was filed today by District Attorney Harry C. Blanton.

Commissioner John A. Burke set Stuckenberg's bond at $15,000. Stuckenberg was arrested last night by FBI agents, who said he admitted the defalcations. Bank examiners said he produced a list of 125 accounts from which he had taken an average of $18,000 a year since 1930. FBI agents quoted Stuckenberg as saying he lost most of the money gambling.

Coal Shortages Hit Cotton Mills

Good News for Pop

Toy Trains Due Before Christmas

This will probably please "Pop" more than the kids, but a few of those toy electric trains should be whizzing into town in time for Christmas.

The two largest manufacturers of the toy trains—Lionel and the A. C. Gilbert Co., which produces the "American Flyer," have promised a "limited number" of new trains this Christmas, along with a few accessories.

At best, there will be only two new trains ready, a passenger job and a freight train. There will be plenty of track and a few accessories such as a tunnel or two and maybe a station or a water tower.

To make sure the trains run on time, the OPA now has under consideration price schedules for the new models. These should be ready within a week.

For most o fthe fireside engineers, however, Christmas will mean another year of getting the old choo choo repaired.

One shop, the Lionel Authorized Train Service, 2320 18th st. nd., now has nearly 200 trains waiting repair in time for Santa Claus, with scads more expected.

Repairman Garrett Van Winkle says fathers (and grandfathers, too) get more pleasure out of the trains than the kids.

Strike Compromise With Lewis Sought Here by Operators

By the Associated Press

Bituminous coal operators searched yesterday for an acceptable compromise with John L. Lewis to halt widespread soft coal strikes, as shortages hit Southern cotton mills and threatened home heating.

Lewis was considering calling the United Mine Workers' 250 member policy committee to Washington to discuss the collapse of the Government conciliation efforts directed by Secretary of Labor Schwellenbach.

The operators held an all-day session in an effort to reach some common ground on which the conferences with Lewis and Schweilenbach could be resumed. The conferences ended Monday night when a majority of the operators rejected the fifth and last peace offer made in eight days of conversations.

While the principals still were attempting a settlement on their own, Secretary of Interior Ickes, Solid Fuels administrator, visited the White House. He told reporters he had "a theory" for settling strikes, but did not elaborate.

"The coal situation is bad and getting worse," Ickes said. "If the mines stay down the situation will be quite serious in some parts of the country by next week."

The Solid Fuels Administration reported that if the strikes continued until the end of this week Southeast cotton mills would be compelled to close.

In view of the dwindling supplies of industrial fuel, SFA some time ago prohibited soft coal shipments to retail dealers in the seven Eastern districts where the strikes have curtailed production.

In some areas this has brought about short supplies for home heating.

Another 1,151,600 tons of bituminous coal production was lost yesterday. A total of 1010 mines were idle, involving 204,319 striking miners. The total los in production since the strikes began September 21 is 12,091,000 tons.

Bill of Rights Plea Given to United Nations

From Yesterday's Late Editions

London, Oct. 15 (AP).—Recommendations for drawing up an international bill of rights, a declaration of civil liberties and a program for freedom of information were presented to the United Nations executive committee today.

A report of the subcommittee on the economic and social council urged immediate creation of five commissions to handle these and other problems.

A commission on human rights would be charged with helping "to eliminate discrimination," writing a bill of rights, the protection of minorities and the drafting of an international convention on "civil liberties, the status of women and freedom of information."

The other commissions would deal with economic and full employment problems, social problems, coordination and statistics.

The outline of work for the economic and social council of the United Nations organization shows that it is intended to handle directly any human problems which are not otherwise looked after on an international level.

Perhaps the most pressing, the report said, is what to do about refugees. It recommended that the first meeting of the council plunge immediately into an attempt to help the millions of people homeless as a result of the war.

The executive committee's meeting today was devoted mainly to deciding when it can finish its work. It appeared that next Monday would be the earliest date.

Debate on the committee's adjournment brought an indictment from Canadian Delegate Escott Reid against the style of the reports being submitted here. He said they were written in "League lingo, Geneva jargon and gobbledegunk."

The main report of the committee will be the basis for the work of the full 50-nation preparatory commission, convening in London November 8.

Coroner Denies Saying Smith Killed Himself

Harrisonburg, Va., Oct. 16 (AP).—Dr. F. L. Byres, Rockingham County coroner, denied tonight in Rockingham Circuit Court that he had ever made the statement that Frank C. Smith, veteran of World War II, died by his own hand, as the trial of Mrs. Grace M. Smith, charged with the murder of her husband went into its second day.

The Rockingham County coroner testified that when he first went to the Smith home on the night of the alleged crime he believed that Smith was a suicide, but that since that time conflicting evidence made it impossible for him to make the statement now that Smith had died by his own hand.

During Cross Examination

Dr. Byres' statement came after Defense Counsel D. Wampler Earman, had asked him on cross examination if he did not believe that Smith had died "of strangulation at the hands of Frank S. Smith." The physician answered that he could not say, and on further questioning denied that he had ever made such statements. He informed the court that his only verdict had been that Smith had died of strangulation, and telling where and when the death had occurred.

The coroner's testimony came early in the afternoon after Chief of Police William J. Kean, who was on the stand most of the morning, had completed his testimony. A wave of excitement ran through the court room late in the day when the commonwealth called as a witness Ralph N. Garner, who also is charged with murder in the Smith death. The commonwealth's only question to Garner was one to identify a picture of himself, which Garner stated was taken "five or six years ago" in Portland, Ore.

Garner Seen at House

Two neighbors of the Smiths testified early in the day that they had seen Garner at the Smith home on various occasions.

Smith, who was discharged from the service in December of last year, was found hanging in the basement of his home February 20, of this year.

Police were summoned by Mrs. Smith and on investigation found two pools of blood on the first floor of the home. The defendant told police that Smith had hanged himself but the commonwealth brought a charge of murder against the veteran's wife.

Price Ceilings On All Houses Discussed In Snyder's Office

A recommendation that Congress grant the Government authority to place price ceilings on all houses—old ones as well as those to be built—is now being discussed in the office of reconversion boss John W. Snyder, it was learned yesterday.

It is believed that Snyder has not yet decided what action to take on the recommendation, pending a study of the chances for the necessary legislation being passed by Congress. The proposal is being advocated by top Government economists concerned with problems of reconversion and inflation.

As it now stands, the suggested legislation provides:

1. Price ceiling to be set all new houses on the basis of cost plus a generous profit to the builder, in order to stimulate construction activity.

2. Price ceilings on all houses sold since January 1, 1943, to be established at the level of the last sale price.

3. Ceilings on other houses which have not changed hands in the last three years to be automatically set at the price at which the first subsequent sale is made. This provision, while possibly hard on the first new purchaser, is devised to prevent wholesale house buying speculators.

Admits Consideration

Although Judge John C. Collet, stabilization administrator, declined to comment yesterday on the report that he was recommending price ceilings, he admitted that work on the problem of possible inflation in housing and construction costs had been vigorously undertaken in his office.

He further disclosed, in an interview yesterday, that he would make recommendations for action on the issue and that he had "been exploring ways and means" to handle it.

Court Orders Probe of Fire Periling Child

Judge Hugh Reid of Arlington County Court yesterday ordered county welfare authorities to investigate the circumstances under which 3-year-old Sandra Jean Cheatham was left in a locked room in a radio repair shop which caught fire early Monday afternoon.

According to information reaching authorities, was left in the shop at 2517 Wilson blvd., while her father, William Cheatham, proprietor, went to Rosslyn. During Cheatham's absence, the shop caught fire and fire engines were called by a passing soldier. The child was rescued from the store by men working at Crouch's Texaco Service station next door, who knocked the glass from the front door to enter the shop.

Cause of the blaze, which caused considerable damage to radio equipment in the shop, was not determined.

County Fire Chief A. C. Scheffel took Sandra Jean to the Arlington Courthouse after the fire was extinguished, where she was turned over to county welfare authorities. She will continue in the custody of the welfare department while the investigation is being made.

tria. He reminded the President that Allied bombs had destroyed more than 50 per cent of the houses in German cities.

"Displaced persons," he continued, "have absolute preference over Germans for housing, but the requirements of the distribution of supplies, the provision of medical care, and the need for welfare activities make it desirable that displaced persons be sufficiently concentrated so that these services may be performed efficiently by the limited supervisory personnel and transport at our disposal. Thus, considerable use has been made of large installations such as brick barracks, apartment blocks and other public buildings in preference to scattered individual billets."

Special centers have been established for Jews, he said.

General Eisenhower admitted that in certain instances American efforts had fallen below standard but he told President Truman that he could count on the American forces to continue their efforts to meet the needs of persecuted people. He added:

"Perfection never will be attained, Mr. President, but real and honest efforts are being made to provide suitable living conditions for these persecuted people until they can be permanently resettled in other areas."

Pay Rise Urged By Wallace And Bridges

By the Associated Press

Secretary of Commerce Henry A. Wallace and Labor Leader Harry Bridges declared yesterday that the Nation's minimum wage level should be boosted from 40 to 65 cents an hour.

Bridges added that even the 65 cent minimum, which will go to 75 cents withi ntwo years, is "gravely inadequate."

The president of the International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union (CIO) said "overtime is extra exploitation of the worker." He told a Senate Commerce and Labor Subcommittee that he believes double time should be paid for all extra work.

Wallace, appearing before a House Labor Committee, said:

"Certain industries should not be allowed to exploit labor by paying wage rates far below those already being paid for equivalent abilities in other industries."

The House and Senate are considering similar minimum wage legislation.

Wallace said he could see no purpose in "a general deflation of prices.

"This country is capable of producing half again as much as our national output in the best prewar year.

"The development of mass markets for a capacity national output depends in considerable part on adequate buying power in the hands of the lower income groups."

Military use of motion pictures required production of projection lamps in 1943 at three times the rate of record peacetime manufacture.

40-Hour Week Delays Checks Of D. C. Part-Time Doctors

From Yesterday's Late Editions

About 50 part-time doctors in the Health Department have gone without checks for the last few days because adjustment of their work to the new 40-hour week was just "too complicated" for health officials to figure out, it was disclosed Monday.

District Auditor Arthur R. Pilkerton revealed that he has held up pay for part-time doctors in the school medical inspection and dental services as he found there was no similarity between hours listed on the department payrolls and the hours actually worked.

A conference yesterday with Deputy Health Officer Daniel L. Seckinger, Dr. Joseph Murphy, chief of school medical inspection, and Dr. Harry Ostrow of the dental bureau, brought promises that the correct schedules would be worked out immediately, Pilkerton said.

Under the new 40-hour week, he explained, these half-time physicians are expected to work 20 hours for their regular annual salary. Traditional schedules for school doctors called for a 3½-hour working day, which totals only 17½ hours when put on the basis of the new compulsory five-day week, he added.

Complications encountered by any addition to the doctor's usual daily working schedule apparently resulted in the department's expedient of turning in full 20-hour payrolls for these employes, Pilkerton said.

Dr. Murphy complained yesterday that the doctors "do not receive very high pay anyway" and that the addition of a half hour's work each day would be "bad for morale."

The bureau chiefs agreed, however, to work out new schedules and in fact, to keep time on their physicians by the day rather than by the week hereafter.

Military Secrets Tested by British With Pretty Girls

London Oct. 16 (U.P.).—The British high command turned loose special groups of beautiful women on British paratroopers before D-Day to test the security of their military secrets, it was revealed yesterday.

The women attempted to extract secrets of forthcoming operations and although the full D-Day plans were known to 35 officers and more than 600 men, the women garnered no information.

Freedom House Scores First Lady For DAR Action

New York, Oct. 16 (AP).—Freedom House in an open letter addressed to Mrs. Harry S. Truman, yesterday charged the President's wife with rendering "mere lip service" to the cause of racial equality when she attended a Daughters of the American Revolution tea after that organization barred Negro Pianist Hazel Scott from its Constitution Hall.

The letter said that Mrs. Truman's spoken disapproval of the DAR action should have been accompanied by "refusal to share the company of any group guilty of flouting the American concept that all men are created equal."

The letter was signed by Harry D. Gideonse, president of Freedom House, and George Field, executive secretary.

Cripps Wants British Export Trade Revived

London, Oct. 16 (AP).—Sir Stafford Cripps, president of the Board of Trade, said last night Great Britain's export trade should be revived and expanded and expressed the hope that the present Anglo-American talks in Washington would be extended "before long" into a wider international conference.

He explained British merchants and manufacturers have "a very welcome volume of orders on their books" and the government is taking every possible step to speed up reconversion to see that they are filled without delay.

Sir Stafford added that he had authorised removal of export license requirements affecting a long list of commodities.

CIO Labor Canteen Protests DAR Ban

A letter protesting the ban on Negro artists from Constitution Hall was ordered sent to Mrs. Harry Truman Monday night by the executive committee of the CIO Labor Canteen.

Terming the ban "undemocratic," the letter called on Mrs. Truman to follow the example of Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt and resign from the Daughters of the American Revolution.

The letter pointed to the canteen as "living proof" that "democracy really works."

Bulgar Vote To Be Nov. 18, Despite Protest

Sofia, Oct. 16 (U.P.).—Premier Kimon Georgiev's government will proceed as scheduled with national elections November 18, it was announced officially today, one day after major opposition parties declared they would boycott the balloting because of a lack of press and assembly freedom in Bulgaria.

The Agrarian and Socialist opposition parties announced their boycott stand in an official declaration to the people. The Democratic Party executive committee shortly afterwards and its leader, former Premier Nicolas Mushahov, announced his party probably will not participate at the polls, thus withdrawing all organized opposition from the election campaign.

Bulgaria originally scheduled elections for August 26, but postponed them after Britain and the United States suggested that the electoral arrangements did not promise a representative vote.

The Agrarian and Socialist declaration said the whole government authority is vested in the hands of the Communists.

The entire nation was summoned by the government to participate in the election to teach the opposition groups a "lesson." The government accused opposing parties of refusing to participate because they fear total defeat.

D. C. to Open Clinic Soon For Skin Ailments

From Yesterday's Late Editions

A new dermatology service, "almost imperative" as a result of the present epidemic of scalp ringworm, will be introduced in the District Health Department by December, Dr. Joseph Murphy, chief of school medical inspection, predicted Monday.

Funds for a skin specialist post have been available since July and a candidate is now being checked for eligibility by the Civil Service Commission, he said. A "maid" helper is also being cleared through Civil Service, he added.

The dermatologist will hold regular clinic hours, offering diagnosis on ringworm for those who can afford to pay and actual treatment for those who cannot afford the services of a private physician, Dr. Murphy said.

Many school children who have already been afflicted with the fungus infection are losing weeks of school time, he added. Failure to obtain proper advice and treatment make the loss in educational opportunity much greater, he said.

The Health Department, meanwhile, intends to survey another school to determine the extent of the disease among the pupils, Dr. Murphy announced.

Brides of Yanks Get No Transport From Parliament

From Yesterday's Late Editions

London, Oct. 15 (AP).—The problem of the 45,000 GI wives who want to be sent to the United States bobbed up in Parliament today, but government spokesmen spiked any hope that the British might offer a solution.

A. J. Barnes, Minister of War Transport, said a vast majority of the wives of British Tommies had not seen their husbands for years and "we must first carry out our own program of getting our own men back."

The British have "made representations" to American authorities on behalf of the unhappy brides.

Sir Thomas Moore, Conservative, asked for assurance that no "preference will be given to these women" until all British war prisoners have been repatriated and the 32,000 wives of Canadian soldiers have been sent to their husbands.

1 Skunk Dog $25—and Not A Cent Less

From Yesterday's Late Editions

If there's a skunk noticeable in the neighborhood or you want to go in for skunk-catching as a business, Old Joe may be the answer.

Joe is a 10-year-old black-and-tan hound dog with a trace of bull dog ancestry. He'll hunt 'possum and 'coon but at heart he's a skunk dog and occasionally gets "skunked up" to prove it. There's no doubt about it when he's wet.

Old Joe is for sale for $25 because his owner, J. B. Gass, contractor, 3423 Sherman ave., has other 'coon dogs, hates skunks, and had just as soon part with Joe.

Joe is a silent trailer but when he bays he's got something his owner said. If it's a skunk you can take it alive or tell Joe to end its career on the spot. Skunk fur is valuable and the black and white animals which some have painfully mistaken for kittens, are easily tamed and make very good mousers, Gass pointed out.

"All you have to do to keep from getting skunked up is to grab them by their bushy tails and lift their hind feet off the ground after Joe bays them," he said.

Two youthful purse snatchers, aged about 16, Monday grabbed the pocketbook of Alice Stager, 1379 North Carolina ave. ne., according to police and escaped by darting into a nearby alley. The robbery occurred at 15th and North Carolina ave. ne.

Three new infantile paralysis cases reported here over the weekend brought the number of area residents treated for the disease this year to 222. Newest cases are a 2-year-old girl from the 700 block of 15th st. se., an 8-month-old girl from the 500 block of G st. se., and a 4-year-old girl from Patuxent River, Md., all of whom are being treated at Children's Hospital.

George Lucas, 40, a huckster of 480 M st. sw., charged with working to exhaustion a horse he said he rented, was granted a jury trial Monday. Lucas said he immediately stopped working the horse when he noticed its condition. Washington Humane Society's complaint brought Lucas into court.

Prehistoric Bone Deposit Uncovered By Ky. Group

Lexington Ky., Oct. 16 (AP).—What was termed "one of the richest discoveries of prehistoric bones ever uncovered in the United States was hailed yesterday by a group of Lexington archeologists.

By using a big bulldozer, the group, in a weekend expedition to Blue Lick Springs in Nicholas County, unearthed numerous bones of prehistoric mastodons and of buffalo, elk and deer.

The prize discovery was a section of an ivory tusk of a mastodon. It weighed more than 100 pounds and was 3 feet long and 7 inches in diameter.

Postlude

By Ray C. Brown

From Yesterday's Late Editions

Henrietta Bagger Plum, the Danish-American mezzo-soprano, whose residency here has acquainted us with a tasteful and dependable artist, sang a pleasing recital Monday evening in Phillips Memorial Gallery with Theodore Schaefer as accompanist. One compliments her on a program which avoided cliches with a care that one wishes would be emulated by many a cantatrice more famous. Her opening selection was from Rameau's second opera, "Castor et Pollux," and comprised arias of serious and light mood; "Tristes Aprets" and "Minuit Chant." These interesting novelties showed one reason why Rameau's dramatic works were not long-lived—his weakness in writing for voice; the other reason was the poor libretti with which he was supplied.

Her second group consisted of three of the sixty lieder by Erich Wolff, whose death in New York in 1913 in his thirty-ninth year was a great loss to the literature of song. "Ich bin so allein," "Alle Dinge haben Sprache" and "Die ganze Welt" are lovely lyrics quickened by a quality of poetic exaltation difficult to define; the sensitive vocal line is fused with the accompaniment in a peculiarly vital way.

For her third group Mme. Plum turned to composers of her fatherland: Hakon Boerresen's "Hvis du har varme tanker," Lembcke's "Majsang" and the aria, "Du hvide blomst" from Alfred Tofft's opera, "Vifandaka." The aria alone had an individual profile and a folk feeling; the songs seemed a mixture of Gade and Jensen.

"The Shelter" from Ernest Bloch's "Quatre Poemes d'Automne" is a remarkable essay in emotional declamation suffused with the composer's unique kind of intensity. Originally written for voice and orchestra, it suffers loss of color in the piano reduction.

The final group was devoted to American composers and consisted of Mary Howe's "Libeslied," John Carpenter's "When I Bring to You Colored Toys" from the exquisite "Gitanjali" suite, Leo Sowerby's refreshing "With Strawberries" which has a delightful Keltic touch. Albert Spalding's "Cherry-Ripe" and John Klein's "Song Is So Old."

Cemetery Chain Wasteful, House Unit Told

From Yesterday's Late Editions

Warren Atherton, past national commander of the American Legion, said Monday the War Department would be wasting money to establish a proposed network of national cemeteries for the burial of war veterans.

He testified before a House subcommittee on military affairs that experience showed only 3 per cent of the Nation's past war veterans chose interment in national burial grounds.

Atherton and a half-dozen other witnesses threw the first cold water on a Senate-passed measure envisioning 79 new national cemeteries over the Nation and expansion of 13 existing ones, including Arlington Cemetery.

"If you take a veteran's body farther than the next community, an average distance of 15 miles, you cut off his family and friends and lose the personal touch," Atherton declared.

He suggested that instead of spending a proposed 122 million dollars for chapels and memorials in the ambitious cemetery program, funds be used to establish "living memorials."

"The veterans are far more concerned with what is being done for them while they are living," Atherton said, mentioning such "tributes" as the GI Bill of Rights.

Atherton, who appeared as a representative of the Western Cemetery Alliance, said he favored an amendment providing an allotment of $50 to aid a veteran's family to buy a lot of his choice.

Col. Robert P. Harbold, director of the memorial division of the Quartermaster General's office, said a tentative memorial to each Navy ship lost in World War II was being planned for the proposed cemetery at Annapolis.

He explained that the ships would be represented in miniature, with the names of the lost crews memorialized on scrolls.

D. C. Woman Named To Memorial Group

Columbus, Ohio, Oct. 15 (AP).—George M. Trautman, chairman of the American Commission for Living War Memorials, today announced the appointment of Mrs. LaFell Dickinson of Washington, D. C., and John B. Kelly of Philadelphia, to the commission.

Mrs. Dickinson is president of the General Federation of Women's Clubs. Kelly was formerly the chairman of the National Committee on Physical Fitness.

The commission was created to aid in the construction of war memorials such as parks and gymnasiums.

Board Seeks 'Clarification' After Report on Landslides

From Yesterday's Late Editions

Landslides endangering eight homes in the 4200 block of Gault pl. ne., are so deepseated that new supports on firm ground may cost more than the homes are worth, a group of soil experts have reported to the Commissioners.

As a result of the report, the municipal heads have asked a special survey board to "clarify" its recommendation that the homes be repaired rather than razed.

The survey board, which include Private Engineers Teunis F. Collier, Howard Woodson and Engineering Dean A. J. Scullen of Catholic University, recently urged that the homes be given new firm footings on "natural" ground.

District officials said they did not understand the exact nature of the repairs suggested or the board's definition of "natural ground." In seeking a classification, they pointed out that soil experts found even natural ground in the area was subject to landsliding as a result of the abnormal rainfall this year.

Negro families living in the area have protested any possible condemnation of their homes, however, on the grounds that they had put all their savings into the relatively new houses and that they "have nowhere else to go."

Not In Conflict

No one familiar with the problem of enfranchising residents of voteless Washington sees any conflict between the McCarran home-rule bill and national representation for the District as proposed in the Sumners-Capper resolution. It is heartening, nevertheless, to have Senator McCarran emphasize this point in his correspondence with George W. Hodgkins. "I do not regard the two routes as alternatives," he wrote. "I do not think they conflict. . . . I simply feel that local suffrage is easier of accomplishment." An elective city government successfully operated, he added, could not fail to help the cause of national representation.

This is sound reasoning. We have no doubt that restoration of suffrage in any form would soon lead to the granting of full political rights to the people of the District. What disturbs us is the fact that so little progress is made with either local suffrage or national representation. If Congress is really concerned over the undemocratic character of the rule it has imposed on the Capital, it can move forward with both these urgent reforms.

Senator McCarran would naturally like to see the community rallying behind his bill for local suffrage first. The difficulty here is, in our opinion, that the Senator's bill would not grant full-fledged home rule. It reserves so many city-council powers to Congress, which is much too busy to exercise those powers, that some home-rule enthusiasts fear the proposed local government would not have a chance to make a creditable showing. If Senator McCarran believes that his bill should go to the Senate first, why doesn't he revise it with the help of a group of local citizens? With an adequate home-rule bill before it, in addition to the Sumners-Capper resolution, the Senate itself could decide which one should be given the right of way first. We think that committee action on both proposals would thus be decidedly helpful to the cause of District suffrage.

Model For Trustees

President Truman has recommended to Congress a policy in respect to Puerto Rico which affords a model of trusteeship for the world. This Nation has justly felt pride in the manner in which it has dealt with its colonial dependencies, the Philippines in particular. As the President observed, "It is the settled policy of this Government to promote the political, social and economic development of people who have not yet attained full self-government, and eventually to make it possible for them to determine their own form of government." It is worth noting that Mr. Truman did not speak of dependents of the United States alone, but had reference, apparently, to dependent peoples everywhere. If we are to assert before the world an interest in the self-determination of all peoples—as, indeed, we must if we wish to promote an orderly and peaceful world—then it behooves us, of course, to set before the other colonial powers not merely precepts but also an example.

Self-determination is peculiarly difficult to work out for the Puerto Ricans because they are divided among themselves. Some want outright independence, some want statehood, some want dominion status. Last spring, Senator Luis Munoz Marin, president of the insular Senate, came to Washington at the head of a delegation representing all Puerto Rican parties with a proposal unanimously adopted by the Legislature of Puerto Rico. This proposal, embodied in a bill by Senator Tydings, would submit to a referendum of the people of the island a choice among alternative forms of political status approved by Congress. The Post indorsed this at the time as "a sensible and democratic procedure." It is precisely the procedure now advocated by the President.

"We should be prepared," said Mr. Truman, "to carry into effect whatever options are placed before the people of Puerto Rico, once the Puerto Ricans have expressed their preference." This is to say that we should not ask the Puerto Ricans to choose among options one or more of which may be unrealizable. Neither should we ask them to choose among options which might entail economic disaster for them. As we pointed out in earlier comment on the subject, "Whatever the future political status of the island, it is clear that it must embrace two essentials—provisions for permanent military bases by which the United States can protect the welfare of this hemisphere and economic arrangements which will permit Puerto Ricans to enjoy real freedom rather than famine." If we do this, we shall have discharged the real functions and responsibilities of trustees.

Intervention

May we illustrate our comment of the other day that anything we do not do as well as anything we do in our relations with Latin America constitutes intervention? The illustration is the laggardliness of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee in holding up Spruille Braden's nomination as Assistant Secretary of State. Immediately the would-be tyrant Peron took comfort. He more than hinted that if the Senators were against Braden, ergo, they must be for Peron, and he blew his trumpet for Argentine support. Fortunately he found that the active forces working against him in Buenos Aires were greater than the passive forces in Washington working for him. We hope the Senators took note of this proof that the issue of intervention in the pure sense of the word has become a phony.

Anyway, it is a new theory that our representatives abroad shall not represent the things that this Nation stands for. By common consent two of our greatest ambassadors were Benjamin Franklin and Thomas Jefferson. Both of them were in France when France was in a similar condition to Argentina's now; the French lay prone beneath a tyrant's heel, and revolution was in the air. Without the slightest discourtesy to the prevailing regime Franklin and Jefferson throughout their embassies remained the exemplars of the American dream of liberty, and on every occasion showed that their sympathies lay with the extension of it.

Franklin in particular stood out as the personification of all the libertarian ideas dear to the age of enlightenment. He put himself in contact with all the philosophers who were planning the French revolution and helped to develop and clarify their ideas. For nine years his portrait was to be seen everywhere, in shop windows and private houses. He even inspired the song of the revolution, Ca Ira. Thomas Jefferson, who came after Franklin, remained as punctilious as Franklin throughout his embassy, but he, too, managed to encourage the revolutionaries by his example. Like Franklin, he was no believer in violent methods, but he believed passionately in liberty and the struggle to attain it. He suggested a course of procedure for the Assembly of Notables of June 3, 1789. A meeting of the leaders of the Patriot Party, arranged by Lafayette, met at Jefferson's house in the effort to arrive at a compromise on the questions of the royal veto and the constitution of the Assembly. He stayed in France three months after the revolution broke out.

If there is one basic United States policy, it may be summarized in Ben Franklin's prayer: "God grant that not only the love of liberty but a thorough knowledge of the rights of man may pervade all the nations of the earth, so that a philosopher may set his foot anywhere on its surface and say 'This is my country.'" In his approach to his Argentine task, Braden, in our opinion, took a leaf out of their copybook. He showed that there was no "easy tolerance for evil institutions" among the American people, yet he committed no error in deportment.

If this is intervention, then we are all for it, and we shall have the founding fathers on our side. In point of fact, intervention is the main ingredient of the Act of Chapultepec, since the nations are bound together in the observance of undertakings resting upon the basic freedoms, and the act conferred rights of intervention in the affairs of errant member nations. This was undoubtedly the warrant for the statement last weekend of President Rios of Chile in which he expressed the hope for the return of democracy to Argentina. But, as we say, our American authority is now so puissant that even passivity is intervention, and the Senate committee's passivity is an example of it. If everything we don't do and everything we do constitute intervention, let us then be actors, and actors on the side of the forces of light.

MacArthur Reports

The events that have taken place in Japan since the surrender fully justify the exultant note sounded by Gen. Douglas MacArthur in his radio broadcast of last Tuesday. Certainly the record is one of which he and the American people can rightly be proud. In a few brief weeks the task of demobilizing the Japanese armed forces throughout Japan has been brought to a successful conclusion—and this without a shot being fired or one drop of Allied blood being shed. As General MacArthur says: "I know of no demobilization in history either in war or in peace by our own or by any other country that has been accomplished so rapidly or so frictionlessly." Only a few years ago Japan occupied a place in the topmost rank of the great powers; today she no longer reckons as a power at all, either large or small.

General MacArthur points out that Japan was thoroughly beaten before she surrendered. Her situation had become hopeless because Allied strategy had divided her strength, destroyed her supply line, shattered her morale. When she gave in, it was not because of any decision of the Emperor or other Japanese authorities, but because she had no choice. Since surrender, the change in Japan's physical status has been accompanied, General MacArthur notes, by a change in the attitude of the Japanese people. "From swaggering arrogance, the former Japanese military," he says, "has passed to servility and fear. They are thoroughly beaten and cowed, and tremble before the terrible retribution the surrender terms impose upon their country." But, if the Japanese are impressed by our might, they are also impressed by the attitude displayed by our troops. It is heart-warming to hear MacArthur's praise for their magnificent conduct. Evidently they have maintained a perfect balance between implacable firmness on the one hand and resolute restraint on the other. This demonstration of how free men act has taught the Japanese something which may have a salutary bearing on their future conduct.

The great lesson for the future that General MacArthur sees in our triumph in the Pacific is the absolute need of a complete integration of the fighting services. As he correctly points out, "in unity will lie military strength." In thus lining himself up with General Eisenhower and the others who are urging a unified command, General MacArthur has given a powerful boost to a program which has logic and experience behind it.

Guidance For WLB

The reported reluctance of War Labor Board members to undertake the settlement of reconversion wage disputes is altogether understandable. As things are now, the board is virtually without standards. During the war it functioned as one of the agencies responsible for the stabilization program. The program, designed as it was to forestall a spiraling race between wages and prices, gave the board a reasonable, if rigid, formula for the granting of wage increases. And in theory at least, though not so successfully in practice, prices were held in stable relationship. But the WLB today, shorn of its prestige and most of its enforcement power, lacks even a guiding policy. How can it rule on wage increases without a knowledge of the extent to which prices may be allowed to rise?

Wage disputes, in normal times, are not in any real sense arbitrable. In a free enterprise system, employers and employes each seek the largest possible share of a firm's earnings; and their right to do so is a premise of our society. There can be no adjudication of such disputes save in reference to an overriding public interest. But if the WLB is to adjudicate disputes in such a frame of reference, the public interest must be defined. This is to say, there must be a policy on wages and prices established by the highest authority, by the President or Congress. Requests for wage increases or for price increases can then be weighed in perspective; and they can be denied or granted in conformity with the policy laid down.

As we have already pointed out, governmental determination of wages and prices is compatible with the free enterprise theory only in an emergency period. But reconversion presents us with a real emergency. For the next half year or so, while machines and materials for the production of civilian goods remain altogether inadequate to consumer demand, we must maintain stability for the very preservation of free enterprise. We must see to it, on the one hand, that reconversion is not senselessly retarded by strikes over unrealizable wage demands and that, on the other hand, the purchasing power of wage earners is maintained at such a level as to promote full production. The WLB can help, if the President wants to resurrect it, in the execution of such policies. But the policies have to be framed before the agency can be expected effectively to carry them out.

Five-Year Plan

In comparison with the reconversion problem that confronts the Soviet Union, our own reconversion problem, stupendous as it is, might almost be said to be child's play. Actually reconversion in the limited sense of rebuilding and reequipping wartime industries for peacetime use is only one of a number of very great economic problems that Russia finds it necessary to grapple with at this time. Overshadowing all else is the task of rehabilitating the economy of regions devastated by the enemy. This means rebuilding countless cities, towns and villages as well as repairing or rebuilding factories, dwellings, mines, power plants and other installations damaged or wiped out in the war. According to Russian estimates, the total damage to industry and collective farms and to property of individuals amounted to the sum of 679 billion rubles at 1941 prices. In addition, there was in Russia even before she got into the war a tremendous backlog of civilian needs which, of course, were not and could not be filled during the war and which, in fact, the war greatly increased.

Characteristically the Soviet government is seeking to solve these problems through the device of another five-year plan. This will be the fourth, and its objective will be to push Russia far beyond the level she reached at the time of the German assault in June, 1941. How well Russia could achieve this objective unaided is problematical. The efforts which the Soviet government is making to procure very large credits from the United States arise out of a realization in Moscow that Soviet recovery will be much slower without outside aid than it would be if such aid were forthcoming. By the same token Russian recovery will proceed at a faster pace if international harmony obtains in the world than if it does not. That is to say, with international harmony there would be greater likelihood of satisfying the needs of the Russian people, who for so long have had to do without even the simplest civilian goods. In this particular, certainly, Russian interests clearly coincide with ours. But how to implement this common need of a cooperative spirit continues to be one of the great problems of diplomacy.

Washington Calling

New Labor Laws

ORGANIZED LABOR is riding for a fall.

This conclusion has nothing to do with the merits or demerits of the arguments the unions are making for higher wages. In asking for higher wages to sustain purchasing power in the face of the ever increasing productivity of the machine, labor can make a strong case.

It is based, rather, on the politics of the transition period. All the grievances, the annoyances, the irritations, the inequities of mass unionization—long delayed and arriving, finally, with a rush—have now come to a head.

On top of this is the insecurity that many people feel in this trying time between war and peace. Veterans out of the services and men still in uniform are wondering whether they will get jobs in our highly competitive system.

WHETHER THE CURRENT rash of strikes will impede reconversion, and to what degree, is beside the point. The forces opposed to the unions can turn the fear and resentment which grow out of doubt and uncertainty against labor on strike.

Add to this the fact that legislation and Supreme Court decisions of the last 12 years give labor most of the breaks. While for many years prior to 1933 the advantages were all on the other side, such ancient history counts for little in forming current opinion.

With this combination of pressures building up, Congress is beginning to talk about drastic new labor laws. Given the disposition of the present Congress, little prodding was needed in any event.

This is a fact which organized labor must face sooner or later. If labor leaders are wise, they will make fairly generous concessions in anticipation of these demands. They will recognize that on at least four major points labor legislation is lopsided or deficient.

1. The most glaring weakness is the lack of any sanctions, other than the clumsy method of plant seizure, to deal with stoppages and strikes where one or both parties are unwilling to arbitrate. Seizure of the oil refineries, under the war powers, was a good illustration of the clumsiness and the futility of this method.

2. The lack of any protection for individual workers' rights against strongly centralized, tightly dominated unions, such as the United Mine Workers. At a UMW convention representatives of minority factions who tried to speak were given strong-arm treatment.

3. The powerlessness of the National Labor Relations Board to enforce its orders against unions. While the board can go to court to compel an employer to recognize and bargain with the certified union, the board is unable to protect that employer from strikes and secondary boycotts by outside unions trying to force a closed shop on him, irrespective of the wishes of his own employes, and even in the face of certification of the rival union.

4. The invasion by unions of the management field. Organization of foremen in mass production industries represents a new departure in American trade unionism. The union can make a grievance out of the failure of a company to discharge an obnoxious foreman, with the result that discipline breaks down in the plant.

THESE MAJOR DEFECTS in our collective bargaining system are all reflected in current headlines. They are reflected, too, in the unhappy dilemma of the Secretary of Labor, Lewis B. Schwellenbach, who is trying without any of the essential tools to cure a situation that can undo all the efforts of the Truman Administration to convert the economy from war to peace.

For some time the Administration has been trying to get agreement to a new wage-price formula. Secretary of Commerce Henry Wallace publicly suggests a 15 to 20 per cent wage increase, with a 4 to 5 per cent price boost. Labor spokesmen have opposed such a formula, believing they can get more by fighting it out.

At this moment, with reconversion in a critical stage, that seems a short-sighted stand. Labor still has great political power. But the winds of opinion are shifting and the story may be different in 1948.

Our Ill-Advised Act

By Sumner Welles

Postponement Of Rio Conference

UPON THE DEMAND of the United States, the American republics have postponed the meeting of their Foreign Ministers set for October 20. This meeting had been called to negotiate in treaty form the reciprocal obligations for the maintenance of regional security into which the American governments entered, as a temporary war measure, at Mexico City last winter.

The Department of State initiated this postponement without formal consultation with the other American governments. It announced that it took this action because of the unwillingness of the Government of the United States to enter into treaty relations with the Argentine dictatorship.

It seems to be difficult for those who are presently charged with the conduct of our inter-American relations to remember that there are 19 other American governments equally concerned in what goes on in Argentina. They seem to be even more oblivious of the strength of public opinion as a support for democracy within the Western Hemisphere.

Public opinion within Argentina is making itself increasingly felt. The overwhelming majority of the Argentine people are demanding the overthrow of the dictatorship which has maneuvered its way to power. The force which public opinion represents has already brought about Peron's elimination from the government.

ON SEPTEMBER 20, after half a million Argentine citizens had demonstrated in Buenos Aires against the regime, the great Argentine newspaper, La Prensa, said: "We need neither mentors, nor tutors, nor prophets, nor redeemers, nor protectors, nor saviors." While that admonition was primarily addressed to Peron and his henchmen, it likewise referred to those well intentioned, but wholly ill-advised, spokesmen for foreign governments who have assumed the role of saviors of the Argentine people. For the Argentine people long ago showed the rest of the world that they can achieve democracy by their own efforts, and that they will not long submit to any form of tutelage, whether domestic or foreign.

A clear distinction must be drawn between official interference by other American governments in Argentina's internal concerns and condemnation of the Argentine dictatorship by public opinion in the other American republics. In their struggle for freedom the Argentine people are receiving the unanimous support of public opinion throughout the New World. Such support is of the utmost value to them in their fight for constitutional and democratic government. Both the press and the radio in the United States have rendered invaluable help. But the moment the United States Government, or the government of any other American republic, undertakes to project itself through official channels into the internal affairs of the Argentine people the beneficial results of freely expressed public opinion are correspondingly weakened.

Neither the individual interests of the United States nor the cause of inter-American unity is served when the United States Government or its representatives take action which is regarded by the peoples of the Latin-American nations as derogatory to their national sovereignty.

Ambassador Braden in Argentina and Ambassador Berle in Brazil have been stanch and eloquent defenders of the democratic faith. Yet, after the present Argentine dictatorship has been overthrown, the Argentine people will lastingly resent the fact that a United States Ambassador harangued Argentine audiences on the iniquities of their own government. And in Brazil Ambassador Berle's recent injection of his own views into the electoral campaign of that country has very naturally aroused a storm of protest. It will not soon be forgotten.

IT IS ENCOURAGING that leading members of the Foreign Relations Committee of the United States Senate have condemned the action of the Department of State in bringing about the cancellation of the conference at Rio de Janeiro without prior consultation with the other American republics. These Senators are stanch advocates of the inter-American regional system and have individually contributed to its successful growth. They evidently see more clearly than our Department of State that the inter-American system cannot become a strong and lasting force for the defense and progress of the Americas and for the safety of our own country unless the Government of the United States scrupulously respects the sovereign equality of the other American nations. That principle is one which the officials of the Department of State generally uphold in their official pronouncements. What is required is its observance in practice.

The postponement of the Rio Conference is unfortunate. The meeting would have offered the American governments the best chance of expediting the negotiation of a treaty which would constitute a pillar of the United Nations organization, and which would render a large measure of security to all the peoples of the New World.

CERTAINLY, SO LONG as the present Argentine dictatorship remains in power, the Argentine Republic should not be permitted to become a party to the contemplated treaty. But the proposed treaty could readily be drafted in such a form as to provide for the inclusion of the Argentine Republic, after constitutional and democratic government has been restored to the people o that country. The conference would also have afforded an admirable opportunity for the Foreign Ministers of the American nations to consult together concerning Argentina's internal situation and the failure of the Argentine dictatorship to comply with its internal obligations, and to consider joint measures of precaution.

The governing board of the Pan American Union should fix an early date for the Rio meeting so that the harm done by the ill-advised action of the Department of State may, insofar as may yet be possible, now be repaired.

Lack Of Action

By Mark Sullivan

Wages And Prices

THE WASHINGTON condition about which the public most needs information consists of three closely united matters—strikes, wages, prices. About each of these, concrete details of fact emerge, and are easy to report. But the condition as a whole, the net sum of it, is difficult to report partly because much of what is being done consists not of action, but of refraining from action.

As to strikes, there is not in sight, at this writing, any proposal from the Administration looking to termination of the strikes or treatment of them as a whole, on some basis of general principle.

To the present course of inaction the activity of Secretary of Labor Schwellenbach's Conciliation Service is not an exception. This has no power to accomplish anything, and is not relied upon to accomplish cure. Because of lack of power, Mr. Schwellenbach, without fault of his own, loses prestige. The waning of reliance upon a Labor Secretary recently appointed with much acclaim is an addition to the general feeling of helplessness.

Neither is seizure of the oil plants by the Navy any real exception to the course of doing nothing. That seizure based wholly on the President's war powers as Commander in Chief, is obviously not a satisfactory remedy for peacetime strikes. Seizure of the oil plants has not given any feeling of satisfaction, and there is reluctance to see it repeated.

IN SHORT, there is no present action, or proposal for action, about the strikes. There is some looking forward to the Nation-wide labor-management conference which Mr. Truman has called for November 5, three weeks hence. In the present condition, three weeks is a long postponement. It should be added that there is, whether justified or not, much skepticism about what that conference can or will do. Any outcome of it that could be effective would be a recommendation which only the President could translate into official action.

As to wages and prices, Mr. Truman had a policy, based on a theory. He announced it formally August 18, and again referred to it as his policy some two weeks ago. It was that there would be no wage increases except such as would not result in inflationary increases of prices. But this policy, and the theory underlying it, are now practically abandoned. It is recognized that the demands for wage increases, in behalf of which strikes are being carried on or threatened, go so far, and are so widespread, that the granting of even a material part of them would result in a general increase in prices.

Recognizing this, there is vague groping for what is called a "wage-price formula." The formula would say that a certain degree of wage increases should be granted, say 10 or 15 per cent. But there is almost as much doubt about the practicability of such a formula, as about the earlier theory that there could be wage increases without any increases in prices at all.

NEVERTHELESS the vague groping for a formula continues. The groping has a standing of its own, it is a substitute for doing something definite. The groping is difficult to report, because it is vague, and because it includes differences of opinion among persons and agencies in the Administration. Much of the groping amounts to putting it up to President Truman. That something authoritative must be done by the Administration is as generally recognized a fact as there is in the whole confused picture.

Meanwhile, there is in the picture one group who do not postpone or temporize, who know what they want and who go after it strenuously. In addition to strikes already called by the labor leaders, and stoppages of industry which are indirect results of strikes, such as the serious decrease of steel production caused by the coal strike, the number of notices calling for strike votes served on the National Labor Relations Board, is greater than ever before. The nearest thing to certainty in the present condition is that it will grow worse.

Letters To The Editor

Communications must carry writer's name and address, though pen names are permitted at the editor's discretion. Letters should be held to not more than 200 words. They are subject to condensation.

'Nimitz On The Defense'

Your editorial of October 9 criticizing Admiral Nimitz for being a brass hat "hierarch" because he opposes a policy you favor of consolidating the Navy and War Departments falls far below The Post's standards.

You must admit that calling names is a poor way to answer any argument. Particularly is this true when you refer to a man who has rendered such distinguished services to the Nation as Admiral Nimitz has.

If anyone has a right to be heard it is he. If anyone should be heard, it is he. If anyone's opinion should be respected, it is his.

Admiral Nimitz has conducted a naval campaign that is one of the classics of history. In most difficult circumstances, where for so long he had so little, he has demonstrated his abilities not by success in just one battle, but by decisive victory in a great and historic war.

He has had to deal on the field of battle with almost all of the arguments involved in the proposed unification. He has proven by his acts, not by mere opinions or speculations, that the proposed unification is not mandatory for close cooperation between the Army and Navy. Furthermore, he says that unification is wrong in principle.

For a great newspaper in the Nation's Capital to refer to such a man as a brass hat "hierarch," lightly dismiss his arguments and ignore the magnificent service he has rendered the Nation as a great fleet admiral is more than unfair.

It is an unwarranted expression of lack of gratitude as well as contempt for a great man's honest and expert opinion.

Editor's Note: We did not use and are not in the habit of using the slighting term "brass hat"; "heirarch" is a perfectly good word, and was so used; we have so praised Nimitz's record that we inspired Nimitz Day; we have argued the case for some degree of consolidation till our pen is tired; and, far from disagreeing that Nimitz should be heard, we have been pleading that service opinion collected by the interservice committee should be given to the public.

'Sulks Among The Pixies'

It would be ideal if all USA citizens, but no Argentines, could read your editorial of October 12, "Sulks Among the Pixies." If any sizable group of Argentines were to read your diagnosis of our strange malady, their long-awaited revolt against their own dictator might cool as they reflected on the unseemly power of a few long-haired, inflated Perons entrenched in the very seat of world democarcy, the Senate of the United States.

It's my guess the patient needs just this dose from now on—a steady series of pricks, and may your knife grow ever sharper. Of course it is too much to expect their constituents to wake up and arrange for permanent vacations from Capitol Hill for these bottlenecks. But it has happened before, and it might once again, that a strong application of editorial caustic, applied Post-haste whenever the fever rises, would relieve a whole Nation, indeed a suffering world, of these recurrent pains which are now getting out of the embarrassing, and into the dangerous stage.

Some of us know it can be done, because several years ago we watched Senator Connally froth and foul the air of a Senate hearing with his insulting treatment of witnesses, only to be fizzed flat, after three disgraceful days, by a witness from your own Fourth Estate, Irving Brant. We can still remember the sighs and titters of relief that swept through that caucus room when Editor Brant braved his chance of jail for contempt, and jabbed the gentleman from Texas on his sensitive publicity nerve.

LOUIS BOARDMAN,
Arlington, Va., Oct. 12.

'Star Chamber Toy'

Your editorial of October 12 expresses the opinion of so many people that if it were articulate would be a deep roar. Atomic power, responsibility and benefits, shared by the world is our one chance for peace and world government. That certain people among us do not want either and force us to fight for those objectives is an appalling fact that we must face. For Congress and the President to decide such a matter on their own initiative and opposing their judgment to that of the scientists is simply preposterous—a tyrannical usurpation. The people, fortunately, are rapidly finding ways other than Congress of making their will felt. They should not be driven to desperation, certainly not at this time. We hope the President can speak to us directly and give us an explanation promptly. Otherwise a great wave of indignation will sweep the country.

ELIZABETH W. STEPTOE.

'You Or We'

The writer was much interested in reading your editorial on "'You' Or 'We'" on October 12. It was right to the point and at an opportune time. I have been surprised at the nonchalant manner in which the President has taken the strike situation, while many of the people see the morale of the country at about its lowest ebb. The coal situation in particular attracts our attention. If the wages of the miners go up again, naturally the price is expected to rise, and this will work a hardship on those poor people who are unable to buy coal except by the bushel. It is well to bear those people in mind, and they are not the only consumers who will suffer through increased prices.

The Federal Diary

By Jerry Kluttz

Failure to Fix Policy Threatens Pay Bill

POLICY: Failure of the Administration to fix a national wage policy is threatened to delay, if not kill, the Downey bill which would raise basic salaries of the Government's white-collared workers by 20 per cent. Hearings on the bill are scheduled to start Monday and up to this moment the Administration has taken no stand on it. In fact, some of the top officials are clearly dodging the issue. No top official has volunteered to testify on the bill and Chairman Downey of the Senate Civil Service Committee, is having a hard time rounding up officials who will frankly state their views. It seems that each logical witness is fearful of saying something that will conflict with the Administration's lack of wage policy.

KLUTTZ

INCONGRUOUS: The official attitude is inconsistent with the clear-cut statement made to Congress on Federal workers' salaries by the President. In his message, the President described Federal salaries as "inadequate and pitiful" and he went on to urge Congress to raise them. Downey agreed and he is trying to do something about the problem. To date, he has been given little help from the President's aides. Privately, these officials are sympathetic to higher salaries in Government, but publicly, they have nothing to say. It's high time those in the Labor Department, Budget Bureau, Office of Reconversion and the Civil Service Commission get together and decide what the Government's wage policy should be. One thing is certain, Downey will keep after them until he gets a frank answer.

PROMISE: It's reliably reported that three wage proposals have been made: (1) a flat 10 per cent increase for all employes; (2) a 15 per cent increase, and (3) a separate bill that would raise salaries of top executives in line with whatever increase members of Congress vote themselves. However, there is some sentiment for meeting the entire issue now by the creation of several new grades at the top of the Classification Act that would reach $12,000 or $15,000. The top is now $9750. Each of the plans is soaking up dust at the moment and the Administration has shied away from taking a stand on Federal salaries for fear it will be interpretated by a national wage policy. But the issue can't be dodged much longer, and in view of the President's remarks, his aides must get together and approve one of the plans.

GPO: The first major postwar wage adjustment to Federal workers has been made at the Government Printing Office with the approval of the Joint Congressional Committee on Printing. More than 4000 per diem employes have had their basic wages raised an average of 8 per cent. The increase will cost nearly a million dollars annually, depending on overtimed worked. Per diem employes at the Bureau of Engraving and Printing will ask Treasury to meet the GPO wage scale. They were given a 5 per cent increase several weeks ago. Unlike white-collar employes, the GPO per diems didn't ask higher salaries to offset the loss of overtime pay. They couldn't as GPO is still on a 48-hour week and a good many employes are working 54 hours. Overtime will be cut down gradually as printing orders from Federal agencies ease off and by Christmas the entire office is expected to be on a 5-day, 40-hour week.

DIARY NOTES: James Scanlon, the able administrative assistant to the House Appropriations Committee, has resigned and he will retire the end of this month. He has had 30 years of service on the Hill . . . The big New York branch office of the Veterans Administration will be in charge of Robinson E. Adkins who has been assistant executive assistant to Gen. Omar N. Bradley . . . War Manpower employes will give Paul McNutt a farewell party Tuesday at the Shoreham . . . Both the RFC and SEC have asked Congress to appropriate funds to meet higher salaries given their executive order employes by administrative action. The agencies adopted the pay formula in the Downey-Jackson Act. RFC also requested $2,575,000 to enlarge its plant-clearance program. It must remove equopment and supplies from war plants within 60 days after they are declared surplus.

ORDER: The order transferring units of Foreign Economic Administration to Commerce, State, Agriculture, and RFC has been delayed. Agriculture wasn't ready to take over the FEA food division. The order is set for Saturday. . . Employes Compensation Commission has asked Congress for $4,800,000 to pay back salaries to 1200 Federal workers who were captured by the Japs on Guam, Wake and the Philippines . . . . Veterans Administration is slated to get the largest deficiency, $928,000,000, for its life insurance fund . . . . Navy will abolish its check-cashing service for employes the end of this year. New employes can't get checks cashed now as they are no longer issued identification badges . . . . The Army, however, is adding new services for its Pentagon employes, the latest being a desk where gas and electric bills may be paid.

Va. Tobacco Price Slump Is Deplored

Richmond, Va., Oct. 16 (AP).—M. A. Hubbard, director of the tobacco section of the State Department of Agriculture, issued a statement for publication today deploring the price differential between Old Belt tobacco market prices and those of similar belts.

Hubbard revealed that while costs of producing the 1945 bright tobacco crop are the highest on record, growers are faced with lower price averages than in 1944.

At the same time, he referred to a resolution adopted on October reau stating that "if present price 6 by the Halifax County Farm Bubelts of Virginia will lose approximately levels continue, growers of the old mately $2,782,500 on this year's crop."

The tobacco specialist said: "After the first day of the opening of the Old Belt tobacco markets in Virginia and North Carolina there occurred a severe price slump in average prices which had up until that time been in effect on similar grades in other belts. Virginia flue-cured growers as well as others have been at a loss to understand just why Old Belt tobacco of identical quality with that which has been and is being sold in other belts should average less than Old Belt markets than elsewhere.

"Old Belt growers in both Virginia and North Carolina feel that this condition, which is but a repetition of what occurred last year, is either a result of the price stabilizing machinery being too cumbersome for effective action or else reluctance on the part of those in authority to drive this machinery hard enough to obtain results before many of our farmers have disposed of their flue-cured crops at a sacrifice. A season's average of $44 for the entire crop would mean little to the grower who happened to dispose of his crop on a day when the average was approximately $40."

New 'Magic Eye,' Developed by Md. Professor, Tells Gems Apart and Sifts Out the Fakes

Baltimore, Oct. 16 (AP).—If you suspect that big diamond is not the real thing don't try scratching glass with it—have its infra-red ray reflection measured.

That's the new, and apparently infallible, method used by Prof. A. H. Pfund of the Johns Hopkins University physics department to identify gems—and to detect even the best imitations as such.

It all started with a brooch, sent to Professor Pfund's daughter by her husband, an Army surgeon who was stationed in England. The brooch held a large, unidentified gem in a gold setting, and the physicist's interest was aroused.

Having worked with optics and infra-red radiation most of his life, Professor Pfund sought to apply its principles to the problem of telling gems apart and sifting out fakes.

The instrument he used for the purpose was a spectrometer, a machine that takes light reflected by a gem through a prism and measures the infra-red rays so produced. The length of the rays tells the story, projected on a chart which represents a "reflection curve."

It's an easy job—if you're an experienced mineralogist—to tell whether a gem in the rough is a diamond, emerald, or any other precious stone, Professor Pfund said, but it's something else again when the gem has been polished into a jewel, which means that its crystalline formations have disappeared and all that remains for the eye to see is the glittering surface that makes gems beautiful.

And that's where the spectrometer with its reflection curve comes in, because the infra-red wave lengths remain almost the same in both the finished jewel and its native, uncut gem. All you have to do is compare the reflection curve of the dubious gem with an original crystal.

An important advantage of the method is that the difference in reflection curves produced by various materials—diamond, ruby, emerald, and glass, for instance—is so great that a "close" decision is never called for, the physcist said.

Other subordinated factors in the system are the power of reflection by each gem, their "refractivity" or quality of casting broken light waves, their color and specific gravity, all of which remain more or less constant in raw and polished stones.

When all these tests made of a polished gem check with qualities displayed by an identified, authentic crystal in its natural state, "identification is no longer a matter of probability, but of certainty," Professor Pfund declared.

Using this system—believed to be a more accurate and swifter method than any yet devised—the professor has identified 16 different kinds of gems without an error. And it takes only about two or three hours to investigate them.

The only condition is that the stone must not be damaged, and that a clear surface of 2.5 millimeters is available to cast its reflection into the spectrometer.

The theoretical background for this method was laid some 40 years ago, Professor Pfund said, but the reason for the delay in its practical application, he added, "is that at that time I had neither a daughter nor a son-in-law."

Md. Boy, 3, Dying of Tumor; Army Asked to Return Father

Cumberland, Md., Oct. 16 (AP).—Three-year-old David Long, son of Corpl. and Mrs. Oscar E. Long, jr., of Cumberland, is doomed to die within a matter of months, the parents have been told by Dr. Walter E. Dandy, noted brain specialist, after his examination at Johns Hopkins Hospital, Baltimore, disclosed the child was suffering from a brain tumor.

The mother, on learning that her son must die, made an immediate appeal through the Red Cross for the return of her husband, stationed in Germany with the U. S. Army of Occupation, and today the Cumberland Evening Times joined in the appeal to President Harry S. Truman, Secretary of War Robert Patterson, and members of the Maryland congressional delegation.

Dr. Dandy called the child's mother to Baltimore Saturday and disclosed that her son was beyond medical help.

David has lost the sight of one eye completely and cannot see well with the other. He requires support when he walks, and has lost the power of speech. He eats little, shows little interest in anything, and rarly smiles.

The mother, on her return to Cumberland, decided to give David a tricycle she had purchased as a Christmas present. She said she planned an early Christmas tree for the child.

When David's father went overseas last February, his son was a normal child. His illness did not become noticeable until June.

Gen Vandegrift Launches Drive At Charlottesville

Charlottesville, Va., Oct. 16 (AP).—Victory over the Japanese was made possible, despite their concentration on amphibious warfare, by three major factors, Gen. Alexander A. Vandegrift, commandant of the U. S. Marine Corps, said last night at the opening of the Charlottesvills and Albemarle County victory and community fund campaign.

"In the Pacific," General Alexander said, "where the Marines were committed almost entirely, the Japanese knew the importance of amphibious supremacy. They prepared and practiced until they believed they were the amphibious masters of the world. But three main factors made it possible for us to surpass them."

He named the factors as "the inherent strength of our Nation, the over-confidence of the Japanese and the Pacific ocean."

Discussing the victory fund, the General, a native of Charlottesville, said that it, "Along with national preparedness, is part of our program to preserve world peace, and in this program we must never fail again."

Night Nurses Hit Walkout Of Day Staff

Bristol, Va., Oct. 16 (AP).—What action will be taken in regard to the group of day nurses who walked out on 60 patients at the King's Mountain Memorial Hospital last week has not yet been decided by the hospital executive board.

The board met here last night and appointed a five-member committee from its membership of 25 to attempt to settle the disagreements which have arisen in the hospital organization since the nurses walked out. The committee, headed by E. B. Cox, has arranged a hearing for 7 p. m. Thursday.

At the outset of last night's meeting President R. G. Boswell condemned the action of the nurses in abandoning their patients and read a statement from night nurses who declared that they had no complaint against the hospital.

The night nurses denounced the action of the 10 registered nurses who walked out on their jobs, adding "we are not anxious to continue working with these so-called nurses."

Boswell said he also considered it unfortunate that a group of doctors from the hospital had taken advantage of the meeting last Saturday, called primarily to hear complaints from the nurses, for an attack on the executive committee and administrative management of the hospital, "further complicating the situation."

The hospital executive called attention to the brief period the nurses who left their jobs have been in the employ of King's Mountain Memorial Hospital, declaring that six of those who walked out had been employed there only since the first of September. "It hardly seems reasonable, therefore," he asserted, "to assume that as a group they were qualified to make a fair appraisal of the hospital and its management." They are not in a "favorable position to make demands of any kind upon the executive committee of the hospital," he added.

However, Jay McCrary, a member of the executive committee, declared: "In view of the fact that we asked the nurses to return to their posts and therefore qualified and restricted our stand, I do not think we should take punitive measures against the nurses."

The writ for the election in the 28th district was issued by Governor Darden October 3, and it was reported that Thompson filed his papers of his intention to run in Leesburg, Warrenton and Culpeper the night of October 8, within the allotted time.

The Moral Would Be Never Annoy the FBI; Notes of the Theater

WHEN IT IS READ in the foreword to "The House on 92d Street," opening tomorrow on the screen at Loew's Capitol Theater, that the events depicted in the Twentieth Century-Fox production are authentic and reproduced with the complete cooperation of the FBI, that statement may be taken at its face value.

J. Edgar Hoover

Although not in any sense a usual "documentary," it is obvious upon a viewing of the picture that it is strictly factual. It is all the more engrossing and exciting on that account, the case histories upon which the story is based being quite as suspenseful and thrilling as anything ever dreamed up by the most imaginative detective fiction writer.

But what we are getting at is that the actuality of the Twentieth Century release yesterday was given the ultimate of conclusiveness in the minds of the drama desks.

Following the preview of "The House on 92d Street" in the National Archives Auditorium and the "intermission lunch," the watchtower contingent adjourned to the FBI offices and were privileged to view the films made by the G-Men in developing the salient points in the case that broke German espionage in this country and protected the secrecy surrounding the development of the atomic bomb. These films are a part of the bureau's permanent files and never have been released for public exhibition for obvious reasons.

The only point is that they lay amazing emphasis upon the fidelity with which Twentieth Century-Fox has duplicated the action and locales—many of the latter are those in which the case actually was developed—of the "spy picture" just a step away from F st. Not only are incidents and events pictured exactly as they were shaped by the FBI, but truth has been preserved even to the extent of casting the film with players who bear striking resemblances in many instances to the participants who are now either in prison for long terms or in their graves for longer.

It was a startling revelation, even to one who has never subscribed to the view of too many that most of what is put on the screen is "the bunk," or, if fact, hopelessly exaggerated and overplayed.

It was of further interest that the FBI films—the highlights of a total of 30,000 feet shot by the G-Men—were run off in the classroom in which the special Military Court tried the eight saboteurs who made the fatal error of landing on these shores in a rubber boat. No regular courtroom being available at the time of the trial, this patricular corridor in the FBI Building was turned over to the military. The irony of the thing was that the eight captured Nazis were tried and convicted in the same room where their captors had learned the art of counterespionage and the technique that brought about the complete collapse of their plans before they even came close to being put into operation. It would be best never to engage the professional interest of the bureau so ably directed by Mr. J. Edgar Hoover. Not only does it never sleep, but it has a million eyes!

We were doubly lucky yesterday. No sooner had we reached the desk from the informative experience with the FBI than Producer Samuel Goldwyn, a friend from 'way back yonder in the old silent days of the movies when his independent film exchange was over there on 11th st., opposite the Palais Royal, dropped by for a characteristically high-voltage visit, aimed at the ostensible purpose of finding out "how are the pictures these days?"—as if he needed to be told that they are at the highest point of average excellence ever attained. Mr. Goldwyn was flying back to New York the next minute and thence back to the coast, first taking time out to inquire about Robert E. Sherwood's new play, "The Rugged Path"—which which turned out ot be superfluous, too, because Mr. Sherwood, it seems, had mentioned to him only the night before that I had liked it. Mr. Goldwyn has been made the butt of all manner of stories, but here is one that does him unsual credit.

Service Rewarded

No mention was made of it by Mr. Goldwyn in our chat yesterday, but from other reliable sources comes the announcement that he has just effected the reorganization of his producing company under the name of Samuel Goldwyn Productions, and placed 50 per cent of the stock in the hands of employes "as my payment for their loyalty—from cameramen to auditors."

James A. Mulvey, who has headed his distribution organization for the last 22 years, has been elected president of the company, with headquarters in New York. Goldwyn becomes chairman of the board, with Marvin Ezzell, Leon Fromkess and Patrick Duggan, production executives in the Hollywood studio, moving up to vice presidencies.

Goldwyn has made known that under the reorganization 50 per cent of the company assets will be made available to several hundred employes vital to the firm on the basis of experience, length of service and loyalty, but that film players will not be included in the group. These employes are being given five-year contracts with the privilege of selling their stock back to the company at the expiration of that time, if they desire.

Not a bad boss to work for!

Last-minute advices are to the effect that beginning today the chief screen attraction at the Little Theater will be a revival of "Hold Back the Dawn," in which the costellar roles were portrayed by Olivia de Havilland, Charles Boyer and Paulette Goddard. The quality of this picture is such as to justify its return oftener than once every four years. And if you were to inquire at the Hippodrome Theater, you would be told that starting Friday two ace release will be revived on the same bill in compliance with a bona-fide multiple-request from patrons. Topping the program will be the picturization of John Steinbeck's "Of Mice and Men," with Burgess Meredith, Noah Beery, jr., and Betty Field, and heavily underscored, the late Leslie Howard's "Mister V," a sterling number in the "Scarlet Pimpernel" mold.

Since today's column seems to be largely dedicated to entertainment of peculiar interest to Washington, this might be as good a time as any to note that "Cloak and Dagger," the film history of the Office of Strategic Services, put together by Col. Corey Ford and Maj. Alastair MacBain, now appearing serially in a national weekly, has been acquired as the first picture for Warner Brothers release from the studio of United States Pictures, Inc., headed by Joseph Bernhard, former Warner executive, and Milton Sperling. It will relate the hitherto untold story of the unsung heroes who risked their lives in daring undercover work in our military intelligence and espionage operations during the war just ended. Something like "The House on 92d Street," perhaps?

'Next Half Hour,' at National, Is Moving and Sensitive Drama

By Nelson B. Bell

"The Next Half Hour," Max Gordon's production of the new three-act play by Mary Chase, author of "Harvey," which last night opened a single week's engagement in the National Theater prior to New York, is quite out of the beaten path of recent seasons, dramatic mood.

Founded on Irish legend and superstition transplanted to this country direct from the ould sod and manifesting itself in an unnamed American city in the year 1913, it is lucidly and sensitively written with a quaint and frequently amusing Celtic charm that often is indulged at the expense of the imaginative drama's movement, but never of its rich character development or authentic atmosphere.

The theme which the author thus has expanded into a comprehensive exposition and partial refutation of Irish lore is succinctly defined by the character of James O'Neill, when he tells his clairvoyant widowed sister, Margaret Brennan, who foresees catastrophe for her household and bends her every tragic effort to prevent it, that "the next half hour belongs to God."

In her pursuit of the premise that what will be, will be, Miss Chase has contrived three interesting acts that combine the explosive temperament, quick wit and pride of race traditional to the Irish with a tenderness, solicitude and unfailing devotion of an adoring mother to her brood to the end of a sound and moving emotional impact which to those of gentle susceptibilities will be felt principally upon the tear ducts.

Foresees Evil

Margaret Brennan, as the play opens, returns to her home with the deep conviction that she is in the midst of a fateful day. She has come face to face with a chill and unsympathetic sister, whom she has not seen in the 10 years since the death of her husband; she feels a Presence in her comfortable middle-class living-room, as if to warn and guide her; comes across the piece of crepe she had worn upon her hat at her husband's funeral—all portents of the evil that will befall the day.

The evil seems to take the form of an illicit relationship between Pat, the elder of her two sons, and Jessie Shoemaker, the acquisitive wife of a railroad man hard-packed with venom living over on the other side of town.

Looking more than his 19 years and posing as a man sure of himself and the world, Pat storms from the home in a burst of temper that he should be accused of an attachment he already has renounced.

Load Is Lifted

The cry of the Banshee heard only by Margaret transforms her suspicion into a conviction that death awaits her son that night. To forestall the tragedy she has so clearly devined, she sends Barney, the younger son and flower of the family, to the Shoemakers' to warn his brother away.

When the Banshee calls again and it is Peter O'Neill, her second brother, who succumbs to a sudden heart attack, a lesser grief supplants the terror in the maternal Brennan breast.

The news brought by the police that her favorite son has been ambushed by Shoemaker, in the belief that it was his brother, lends the play a climactic force that gives point and power to the title's premise that humans might better bide by their fates than attempt to circumvent them.

The piece has been cast with impeccable judgment, admirably set by Edward Gilbert and directed with a fine eye to alternating moods and sharp contrasts by George S. Kaufman.

In her return to the boards after a 10-year absence in the films, Fay Bainter achieves no less than a personal triumph. Hers is the burden of the play, since it is as much character study as drama of movement, and to it she brings great variety of expression, delicate modulations, strength and an altogether full-dimensioned portrayal. Miss Bainter would carry the three acts handsomely, even were she not supported by an especially expert group of associates in the other roles of prime importance.

Admirable Support

Foremost among these is Jean Adair, who contributes an extraordinarily effective bit of portraiture as Bridget O'Neill, the sister and aunt held in such small esteem until she discloses a nature of some warmth in the moment of final crisis.

As the Brennan sons, Pat and Barney, John Ruth and Conrad Janis supply as fine a brace of juvenile characterizations as the stage is apt to see, with particular emphasis upon the perfection with which the youthful Janis impersonates as lovable a figure as has come along in months. Pamela Rivers is intelligently and properly ingenuous as the daughter, Frances, and Thelma Schnee precisely the right choice for Jessie Shoemaker, just as she was for the original Bessie Watty, with Ethel Barrymore in "The Corn Is Green."

The brothers O'Neill, Peter and James, are played in proper key by Francis Compton and Art Smith, both of whose presence is more on the atmospheric side than essential to the major trend of the play's basic drama.

Minor roles are played by Esther Owen and Larry Oliver in a manner to add to the impressiveness of a work for which there should be a wide and enthusiastic public.

Philip Loeb, of the Group, stared at the prodigal and said, contemptuously: "Look at him. The Hollywood actor with his $175 suit" . . . "You're wrong," Garfield eagerly assured him. "I never spend more than $35 for a suit." Loeb ignored this penitent touch "Then look at him," said Loeb, "the Hollywood actor, making all that big dough, and spending only $35 for a suit."

CUBA, strategically placed at the crossroads of two continents, is a beauty spot beloved by many for its gaiety and old world charm. But to our exporters and importers this enchanting tropical island is also a very important source of sugar, tobacco, vegetables and tropical fruits—as well as a market for many of the products of American labor. Airlines Start Job of Writing Travel Rules

Montreal, Oct. 16 (AP).—Air line operators from over the world today began the job of working out common standards for handling passengers and cargo with an admonition that whatever they do "should advance internationalism."

Achievement of that goal, H. J. Symington, Canadian Air Line chief and president of the International Air Transport Association (IATA), said, "involves abandonment of selfish nationalistic or selfish company ideas."

"Today the world is and for some time will be on the edge of an abyss," Symington said. "This association must avoid like the plague any action or any thought or suggestion which could even remotely contribute to world chaos, and it must courageously and selflessly contribute to world order."

Edward P. Warner, president of the Interim Council of the Provisional International Civil Aviation Organization (PICAO), told the operators that PICAO, which represents 36 nations, had decided to permit airline observers to sit with its technical committee to get the benefit of their experience in commercial operations.

D. C. Bankers Map Plans for Victory Loan

From Yesterday's Late Editions

Representatives from 21 local banks met at the Mayflower Hotel yesterday to plan the $57,500,000 Victory Loan campaign.

W. J. Waller, chairman of the District War Finance Committee, told bankers they would be asked to sell $500,000 in E bonds, 12 million dollars in other issues for purchase by individuals, and 39 million dollars in bonds for purchase by corporations.

Ted Gamble, national director of the Treasury Department's war finance division, told the bankers that "no group of bankers in the Nation has done a better job in former campaigns."

Gamble said the victory campaign is necessary to meet an eight-billion-dollar Treasury deficit during the first six months of 1946 and to pay off 13 billion dollars in maturities and redemptions of Government bonds during the same period.

Urging sales to individuals, he pointed out 85 million people own 23 per cent of public debt and about three fourths of the E bonds are held by people making less than $5200 a year.

"A large part of the estimated five billion dollars annual carrying charges on the national debt is being returned to the people and thus into our own economy," Gamble said.

Units Study Smoking in Highschools

From Yesterday's Late Editions

While representatives of five parent-teacher organizations knotted their brows over schoolboy smoking in a closed meeting at Central High School Monday two boys and a girl gave their own unconcerned opinion of the issue.

Strolling from the building, past a large "No Smoking" sign in the foyer, they paused on the steps, lighted cigarettes, and strolled down the street.

Elsewhere on the student-behavior front the following events portended: A report on "behavior of students at school sports events" was scheduled for presentation at tomorrow's Board of Education meeting by Superintendent of Schools Robert L. Haycock. The board also will hear reports on replacement of broken windows in school buildings and reports on projected and current construction.

Protests from several board members are expected on the statement of Board Member Adelbert Lee that smoking and drinking are prevalent at high school athletic events.

Circus Audiences Missed This Act

The lady on the horse is fulfilling an ambition which she shared with Admiral "Bull" Halsey. But the nag, Snow, doesn't belong to Hirohito. It is part of the Victory Circus at Uline Arena where Post reporter Beryl Shoenfield tried her skill at bareback riding. This is a brief moment of triumph before Snow did a sidestep

The circus came to Washington Monday for the first time since peace was declared but not much of Washington went to see it.

Only about 1200 persons turned out Monday night to see Promoter Frank Wirth's All-Star Victory Circus at Uline Arena and a smaller crowd was on hand for the afternoon opening.

The 22-act show went over big with those who turned out. It offered everything in a circus way from an audience-tingling tiger act to elephants, dancing horses, a dozen clowns, rope-skipping dogs, many—perhaps too many—trapeze performers, sawdust, spun-sugar candy and colored balloons.

There was, for the afternoon audience, an unfortunate and unexpected bit of excitement when Hazel Carlton of Bordentown, N. J., one of the roller-skating specialists, slipped while executing a turn and broke her arm.

Captain Roman Proske and his eight performing Bengal tigers opened the show. The Captain, who employs a sort of Evil-Eye Finkle technique on the big cats, kept tickling their whiskers with his hand while he put them through their routine. He uses neither a gun nor stool to protect himself.

The second most popular act was the Robertas and their trained dogs and ponies, featuring a sequence in which a white collie played jockey.

In addition there were the Flying Valentines, a big-time trapeze act, the three Rooneys—another aerial act, Roberto De Vasconcellos and his dancing horse, Belmonte, Herinwinks and his performing elephants—three of them, Pape and Conchita—a novelty act, Don Dorsey, a daring trapezer, 12 clowns and many others. Freddie Clark and a 12-piece band furnished the music.

One of the crowd-pleasers was a novelty horseback riding act in which Ross Murray, 323 H st ne., Eugene Williams, 724 6th st. ne., and Pete Conto, 221 K st. ne., came down from the audience to participate.

Soviet Troops To Help Poles Fight Bandits

From Yesterday's Late Editions

Warsaw, Oct. 15 (AP).—The Polish government said today that the Red Army is sending headquarters units to each of the 17 provincial capitals of Poland to put down an epidemic of banditry.

The announcement said the action was by agreement with the Polish government.

Each unit will be commanded by a Russian general.

Meantime, the government's deadline for surrender of the remnants of the Polish Home Army which owed allegiance to the Polish government in exile in London expired tonight. There are many evidences that thousands of these soldiers have refused to come out of hiding and surrender their arms.

At the same time a government decree authorized drafting of men 18 to 55 and women from 18 to 45 to labor for "the general economic welfare of the country."

Germans Get Weighed for Health Oftener

From Yesterday's Late Editions

Copyright by New York Tribune, Inc.

Frankfurt am Main, Oct. 15.—Large samples of the German population will be weighed monthly instead of every 90 days by "flying squads" of malnutrition experts because of growing concern by the American military government on the effects of the occupation diet.

The health division of the military government weighed 46,620 adults in 27 cities last month. This study showed that males between 20 and 39 years of age have dropped 5.3 pounds from normal, that males from 40 through 59 have dropped 11.7 pounds, and that those of 60 and over have lost 19.9 pounds.

Of the females, the study showed that those of an age to be attractive to American troops have lost 4.1 pounds on the average, the least of any group, while those between 40 and 60 have lost 13.7 pounds. Females over 60 have dropped 20.3 pounds from normal.

No conclusions accompanied these figures except that the young women were holding up best on the sharply restricted rations, while the elderly people were rapidly reflecting poor food conditions.

Wiesbaden, Germany, Oct. 13 (AP). The American Military Government trimmed the average German civilian ration tonight for the next four weeks to 1345 calories.

Truman Urges Joint Action To Achieve Domestic Ends

From Yesterday's Late Editions

President Truman said Monday that agriculture, business, Government and labor must work hand-in-hand "if we are to realize our opportunities for steadily improving the national standard of living."

He made the statement in a letter accepting a report by the National Planning Association on ways to achieve domestic objectives.

The report, entitled "4 for 4," said the American people are seeking four principal objectives—opportunity, security, higher living standards and respect for human rights. It said they could be attained through joint action by four groups—agriculture, business, labor and government.

The President said "It is particularly gratifying to note the emphasis you place on respect for human rights. Enduring solutions to our national problems will be found only insofar as our human relationships are based on mutual trust and respect.

"I fully agree that cooperative planning by agriculture, business, labor and government is necessary if we are to realize our opportunities for steadily improving the national standard of living."

Later, NPA announced that the first of a series of national conferences looking to achievement of the four objectives would start here December 7.

NPA Chairman H. Christian Sonne said the conference "will be devoted to what seems to us, at this time, to be one of the crucial national problems."

"It is," he said, "the problem of how we can develop principles under which there will be clear incentives for the increased productivity essential in a full employment economy."

Science Stressed In New Plan for National Defense

Two members of the Senate Military Affairs Committee Monday introduced a bill for a single department of national defense which would give a new division of scientific research equal footing with the Army and the Navy.

Under the measure, the Army and Navy would be merged under one department comprising six divisions—scientific research and development, aeronautics, Army, Navy, procurement and military intelligence. An undersecretary would head each division.

The bill was introduced by Acting Committee Chairman Edwin C. Johnson (D., Colo.) and Senator Harley M. Kilgore (D., W. Va.).

Johnson said the existing national defense structure is "antiquated, outmoded and divided."

The House postwar policy committee meanwhile decided to ask the joint chiefs of staff for a copy of their confidential survey on unification of the Army and Navy. It expected to receive it by Wednesday.

Poland Protests, But Signs Charter Of United Nations

Polish Foreign Minister Wincenty Raymowski Monday signed the United Nations charter but protested Poland's exclusion from the framing of the charter.

"On formal and rather fortuitous grounds," he said, "the Polish government was not invited to take part in the deliberations of the San Francisco Conference . . . Polish thought was therefore not allowed to contribute to the common achievement."

He read his statement after affixing his signature to the original United Nations charter and the International Court of Justice statute. The Polish signing completed the roster of original members of the United Nations organization.

Slain Woman's Spouse, Friend Take Lie Test

Pontiac, Mich., Oct. 16 (U.P.).—Lydia Thompson, who emerged a gay grand dame from her flourishing laundry, was "a forceful, determined person who got what she wanted" and for two years she had been aware of her husband being in love with his secretary, police learned today as they sought the killer who slashed the wealthy woman to death.

Police were giving lie detector tests to Louis Veto Thompson, 38, the husband, and his pretty secretary, Mrs. Helen Budnik, who had admitted to two years of clandestine love ranging from his office in Highland Park to Miami.

Deny Knowledge of Slaying

But both denied having had any knowledge of the savage slaying last Thursday.

Police found friends who told of her determined character. Thompson said he had asked her for a divorce but "she was furious and refused to answer me." Mrs. Budnik said her employer's wife had been so very jealous of her she had twice threatened suicide and had employed private detectives.

Mrs. Budnik frankly told police of her intimacy with Thompson. Since Thursday, she said, she had spent two nights with him.

Followed to Florida

Last spring she went to Florida to get away from Thompson, but he followed her, she said.

Mrs. Budnik said Mrs. Thompson once swallowed an overdose of sedative and another time attempted to leap from a hotel window.

A year ago Thompson asked for a divorce. Mrs. Thompson immediately went into a curious life. By day she secluded herself. At night she gave lavish parties at her estate, where she lived alone, doing most of the housework.

Repudiate Monopolies, Businessmen Urged

From Yesterday's Late Editions

Boston, Oct. 15 (AP).—Wendell Berge, Assistant Attorney General, said today the capitalistic system "is undergoing perhaps its most critical test," and if it is retained American businessmen must immediately repudiate cartels or monopolistic practices.

"Either competition exists or it does not," he told 1000 merchants and other businessmen at the seventeenth annual Boston Conference on Distribution in the first of a two-day session.

"It does no good to pay lip service to the ideal of a free market and yet accept the fact of illegal combination or collusion in prices."

R. W. Gifford, vice president of the Norge division of Borg-Warner Co., named Mexico and South America as good prospects in developing new world markets for American business which may treble export volume of the years 1936 through 1940.

Malcolm P. McNair, professor of marketing at the Harvard Graduate School of Business Administration, and Q. Forrest Walker, economist for R. H. Macy & Co., agreed that percentage costs for distributing goods to consumers probably would be higher in the first postwar years.

But Walker added he thought people would have more money—meaning that "the market for higher priced and better quality goods will be broader than before the war."

Walter D. Fuller, president of the Curtis Publishing Co. and chairman of the field development division of the Committee for Economic Development, emphasized the importance of selling if jobs are held to a high level.

Saul Cohn, president of City Stores Co., told the businessmen there would be a new mass market for goods but that the only way to reach such customers was by reversing the formula of "the highest unit price for a narrow market."

Dr. Charles F. Phillips, president of Bates College, predicted that retail outlets would expand, that there would be more group buying among merchandisers.

Dr. Gerald Wendt, science consultant for Time magazine, said the facts now known about atomic power should be released to American business.

Messages were read at the conference from President Truman, Secretary of Commerce Wallace, Secretary of Agriculture Anderson, Assistant Secretary of State Dean Acheson, British merchandiser Lord Leverhulme, Canadian Minister of Trade and Commerce James A. MacKinnon and British Ambassador Lord Halifax.

Doolittle Urges World Police in Maintaining Peace

Detroit, Oct. 16 (INS). — Lieut. Gen. Jimmy Doolittle last night called for a world police force to maintain the peace and for unification of America's armed forces into one Department of National Defense.

He told the Automotive Council for Production in Detroit that peace requires "an agency capable of making any nation that doesn't choose to abide by the majority ruling comply with their desires. This calls for a world police force," he said.

The Eighth Air Force commander said America must take an active part in world affairs, and to do this "must be strong militarily."

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

By Drew Pearson

THE BACKSTAGE DISPUTE raging over the future of the atomic bomb is one of the hottest and most important ever to hit Washington. Many of President Truman's advisers are split over it, while most of the scientists who worked on the bomb are boiling mad over the May-Johnson bill which the Army is attempting to rush through Congress.

While they aren't advertising the fact, neither Congressman May of Kentucky nor Senator Ed Johnson of Colorado had a chance to study the bill they are sponsoring before they introduced it. However, Maj. Gen. Leslie Groves, the Army officer in charge of the atomic bomb, is adamant that the bill be passed immediately. Some hint he is afraid of discussion.

Meanwhile, atomic scientists say that Groves was the hardest man they had to convince regarding the importance of the atom when the idea was in the initial stages of discussion. If it had not been for the determination of the late President Roosevelt, scientists say that the Army would have ditched the project.

Atomic scientists also relate this inside story of what happened immediately after the first atom bomb was dropped on Japan. They say that General Groves' biggest boner was when he released a study of atomic energy by Prof. Henry D. Smythe of Princeton.

After publication of this report, scientists told Groves that he had cleared enough information to put any nation well on the road to the atomic bomb secret.

Groves called in his adjutant; tried to get the report recalled. The adjutant only smiled.

"Did you ever try to pull an egg back into a chicken?" he asked.

Scientists' Union

MEANWHILE THE SCIENTISTS have organized into virtual "trade unions," chiefly with the aim that their secret be used for the benefit of mankind. The organizations they have formed so far are:

1. The Association of Almos Scientists in New Mexico;

2. The University of Chicago Scientists;

3. The Manhattan District Scientists;

4. The Oak Ridge Scientists.

They also have issued memoranda to the general effect that almost any nation possessing sufficient material (uranium, plutonium graphite, and heavy water), can produce the bomb on the basis of information which the War Department already has disclosed.

"It is unrealistic," say the Oak Ridge, Tenn., scientists, "that nations will renounce the use of the atomic bomb in war. The only major weapon which has been renounced is poison gas, doubtless due to its comparative ineffectiveness.

"We believe there is only one way open to us. Every attempt must be made immediately to arrange for the control of this weapon by a world authority. This means an effective international control of the production of the vital materials, and of their use by all countries. Only the authority may manufacture atomic weapons, and by the fact that they alone are in possession of these weapons, enforce international law and peace."

Senate Absenteeism

SENATORS ARE GETTING sensitive. Jibes at Senate absenteeism and excessive globe-trotting have hit home. The new seating chart of the Senate, distributed to help gallery visitors spot where Senators are seated, now contains this special explanation:

"Senators not present in the Senate chamber may be found at committee meetings, in their offices transacting legislative business, or at the various executive departments on official business."

Snappy Truman

IT'S ALWAYS DIFFICULT to advise a President of the United States, but friends of Harry S. Truman are hoping he will get away from his habit of making snap decisions. This includes even some Cabinet members who benefit from his quick decisions.

Newspapermen who attend White House press conferences, long have commented privately on Truman's tendency to shoot out an answer. He comes out with statements which neither Roosevelt, Coolidge, nor Hoover would have made without careful consideration.

Cabinet members find the same is true in private conferences. They are delighted to get such quick decisions, but sometimes wonder whether it is a good idea to omit consultation with other interested departments. The snarled-up Pacific island bases, which Truman gave to the Navy without consulting the Army, State, or Interior Departments are cases in point.

The quick decision regarding the atomic bomb bill is another. Insiders say Truman never saw the bill which the Army sent to Congress.

Note—Most memorable world-shaking result of White House snap statements was when Warren Harding, replying to a press question, said that under the Pacific Security Pact Japan would not be able to build bases on her own main islands. Charles Evans Hughes, then Secretary of State, had to deny this and sign a special protocol to unsnarl the Harding error. After that, and up until the Roosevelt regime, questions were handed to the President in writing.

New Dies Committee

THE HOUSE COMMITTEE on Un-American Activities is getting more and more like its predecessor, the Dies Committee. With freedom of the press something to be reserved only for those who support the committee, its members have started to investigate the radio scripts of four liberal New York radio commentators—Cecil Brown, Johannes Steel, Sidney Walton and William Gailmor . . . When someone informed the committee last month that Mr. Sam Kapp, a connecticut filling station operator and brother-in-law of Molotov, was financially interested in the Bridgeport (Conn.) Herald, Karp was immediately called down for questioning. He denied owning any part of the paper.

Later committee members and Chief Counsel Ernie Adamson admitted they had never even seen a copy of the Herald—not even after spending an afternoon discussing the paper had they taken the trouble to look at a copy of it.

Nazis Form Fuehrer-Type Party of Elite

Egelsbach, Germany, Oct. 15 (Delayed) (U.P.).—Military government authorities disclosed today they were seeking the organizers of an embryonic "elite" German political party built on Nazi lines and calling itself the German "Reconstruction Party."

Political parties in Germany must be authorized by the military government and this one is not.

Outline of party philosophy showed it advocates a fuehrer-type leadership; an "elite" membership, and an "honor court," very similar to the Nazis, which would help select members and would discipline them when necessary. The court would have complete jurisdiction over all members, especially leaders.

Prince Ludwig of Hesse said a woman approached him, seeking support for the organization. He said her plans appeared to call for a Nazi-type outfit, a party composed of the wealthy or of former Nazi members.

Ludwig identified the woman as one Maria Sevenich, and said she claimed to be a former Communist.

YESTERDAY'S ANSWER

Tax Concessions for Veterans Urged at Hearing in Senate

By the Associated Press

Pleas that special tax concessions for veterans be written into the tax reduction bill got an apparently sympathetic reception yesterday from the Senate Finance Committee.

They came from spokesmen for the CIO and the National Lawyers Guild at the Senate group's second day of hearings on House-approved legislation which would reduce 1946 tax bills by $1,190,000,000.

Chairman George (D., Ga.) told reporters after the session that he thought the committee probably would write in some provisions concerning veterans, but he did not say what they might be.

Clifford McAvoy, representing the CIO, recomended forgiveness of income taxes up to $250 owed by veterans for the years 1941 to the date of their discharge. He also proposed that the $1500 special exemption now granted servicemen be continued for a year after discharge from the service.

Parallel Requests

Henry H. Wolf, appearing for the lawyers' guild, took a similar stand.

Both McAvoy and Wolf also made parallel requests that the excess profits tax be left unchanged for 1946 and that the House bill be rewritten to reduce individual income taxes by $6,500,000,000, chiefly in lower income brackets.

The House bill would cut the effective rate of the excess profits tax from 85.5 to 60 per cent in 1946 and repeal it entirely for 1947. It would cut individual income tax bills by $2,647,000,000.

Secretary of the Treasury Vinson has recommended complete repeal of the excess profits tax, effective January 1, and a reduction of individual income taxes by $2,085,000,000.

Supported by Businessmen

The Treasury head argued that continuation of the excess profits tax would tend to restrict business expansion.

This view was supported by three businessmen—witnesses who followed McAvoy and Wolf to the committee's witness chair.

They were Walter M. Ringer, of Minneapolis, vice chairman of the Commerce Department's Small Business Advisory Committee; J. L. Rosefield, a peanut butter manufacturer with plants at Portsmouth, Va., and Alameda, Calif., and Thomas J. Reilly, Philadelphia attorney.

In brief, the argument of all was that the tax sops up money which ought to go into business expansion and deters investment in new businesses.

Critical Questions

McAvoy stirred up a crossfire of critical questions by a bristling attack on proposed repeal of the excess profits tax as a move which would give "huge windfalls to the richest corporations."

Senator Hawkes (R., N. J.) told the CIO spokesmen at one point:

"Your organization is trying to yet a 30 per cent wage increase. How do you expect to get it out of a dead duck?"

McAvoy said he didn't believe there would be any "dead ducks."

Retention of 20 AAF Installations Is Recommended

By the Associated Press

Army Air Forces has recommended retention of 90 flying fields, depots, hospitals and other establishments.

Making public the list yesterday, the War Department said the recommended plan is confined to stations housing combat tactical units and the major depots, hospitals and establishments of the supporting services.

The list of stations, the announcement said, is based on maximum requirements for the Air Force to be maintained in the interim between war and eventual peacetime needs.

Included in the installations to be retained are, Langley Field, Hampton, Va.; Bolling Field, Washington, D. C. and Andrews Field, Camp Springs, Md.

Marines March Into Peiping Amid Welcome

Peiping, China, Oct. 16 (AP).—The Marines returned to Peiping and a hero's welcome today. For two hours steel-helmeted Devil Dogs rode in Japanese army trucks through cheering throngs of Chinese.

An estimated million Chinese turned out. They shouted, "Ding How," the Chinese equivalent of "well done." Girls threw flowers in the path of the Marines and boys ran beside the trucks to shake hands with Americans.

But it is not all roses and cheers for Marines moving into north China to help Chinese troops disarm the Japanese. Chinese bandits fired on an advance patrol of Marines yesterday 30 miles outside of Tientsin. Three Americans were wounded. The convoy went back and returned today with two escorting tanks.

Peiping's roaring welcome to the Marines was a repetition of the greeting given advance Chinese Nationalist troops who flew into the ancient walled city yesterday, in full battle array.

Pitt Student, 18, Admits Shooting Candy Store Owner

Pittsburg, Oct. 16 (U.P.). — Pitt student William Blader, 18-year-old follower of the German Philosopher Nietzsche and admirer of Adolf Hitler, told police last night he shot Frank M. Amberson at a predawn rendezvous on the grounds of Carnegie Music Hall.

Blader admitted he shot Amberson when the 50-year-old candy store proprietor attempted to become intimate.

Police said Blader admitted meeting Amberson three times last week—on Monday, Wednesday, and early Friday. Amberson's body was found Friday morning. Two bullets had penetrated his back. His hat was found in clump of bushes nearby.

Earlier Blader had said the shooting was an accident, that he had been near the lake testing a new pistol which he had bought to protect himself from students who persecuted him because of his belief in Nietzsche.

Control Over Atoms

By Ernest Lindley

Internal And International

THE ARGUMENT over control of atomic energy has become blurred by failure to distinguish between its internal and its international aspects. The distinction was drawn in President Truman's special message on the subject. He asked for prompt legislation on internal control. The Johnson-May bill providing for an atomic energy commission with broad powers is an answer to that request.

LINDLEY

The President also sketched some of his ideas about the international control of the release of atomic energy—or, rather, the objectives to be sought: free exchange of scientific information, on the one hand, but renunciation of the use of atomic energy as a war weapon, on the other. The sketch was incomplete. The whole problem of international control needs more thought than the President and Congress have had time to give it.

The clamor against "railroading through" the Johnson-May bill comes chiefly from persons who believe that it is foolish to try to keep the atomic bomb as an American monopoly or as a U. S.-British-Canadian secret for any length of time. President Truman added to their anxiety by his off-the-cuff comment on the subject at his impromptu press conference last week. He said nothing new. But his assertion that we would keep the bomb to ourselves, when it stood by itself, made an impression quite different from the more rounded statement in his message to Congress.

THE SCIENTISTS and technicians who worked on the atomic bomb surely ought to be heard—and will be, with respect. But the statement issued on behalf of the group at Los Alamos, New Mexico, is concerned with international control. The creation of a national atomic energy commission was recommended by the scientists, technicians and engineers who had the highest responsibility for the success of the enterprise. It bears their endorsement. The need for setting up such an internal agency of control with the broad powers proposed by the President has not, up to this writing, been challenged. Nor has the argument for doing it promptly, outlined by the President, been refuted.

Until satisfactory arrangements concerning international control can be worked out, the American-British-Canadian achievement should be protected by as much secrecy as possible. That is no more than elementary prudence. When and if the information which we have is made available to other nations it should be as a positive act, not by unauthorized leakage.

THE ACT CREATING a national agency of control need not indicate in any way what the eventual policy concerning international control will be or should be. Many high officials, as well as many members of Congress, think that it would be far-wiser for Congress formally to declare that the United States intends to take the initiative in working out a system of international control and supervision which will make it safe to share the knowledge which we now have. But it seems unlikely that Congress could quickly agree on a general declaration of international policy. An alternative is to make it plain that it is acting now solely to set up adequate internal controls and at the same time to begin, through a special joint committee, a study of all the aspects of international control.

The line between internal and international control, drawn by the President, is natural. By keeping it, Congress can deal with an unprecedented problem in an orderly way.

Delegates of 30 Countries Sign Food Pact of United Nations

Quebec, Oct. 16 (INS).—Delegates from 30 nations signed a constitution today and brought into existence the first permanent body of the United Nations—the food and agriculture organization pledged to eliminate hunger as a cause of war.

Russia did not sign the constitution and her name was not called. V. A. Sergeev, head of the Russian delegation of 25, said his official papers authorizing him to sign had not arrived. The way was left open for him to attache his signature later.

Lester B. Pearson, Canadian Ambassador to the United States and chairman of the interim commission which paved the way for FAO, presided at the signing ceremony.

Secretary of Agriculture Anderson signed for the United States. Other signatory nations were Argentina, Belgium, Canada, China, Czechoslovakia, Denmark, Dominican Republic, Egypt, France, Greece, Guatemala, Haiti, Honduras, Iceland, India, Iraq, Liberia, Luxembourg, Mexico, Netherlands, New Zealand, Nicaragua, Norway, Panama, Peru, Philippines, Union of South Africa, United Kingdom and Venezuela. Nations expected to sign later include Poland and Ecuador, whose delegations have not yet arrived.

Although FAO came into existence in an atmosphere of optimism, corridors of conference headquarters rumbled with talk which pointed to a possible conflict between consumers and farmers.

This underlying issue was mentioned publicly for the first time at a press conference held by Pearson before the signing ceremony.

Asked if FAO might jeopardize farm prices and farm policies within the United States, Pearson replied:

"I do not think so. I am aware that there is this fear but I do not think it is valid. I have heard it said that if we increase production in countries which are low-producers, it would harm the trade of big-producing nations.

"I do not see, however, how we can suffer in any part of the world just because food production is increased in another part."

Others said, however, that FAO may face conflict between consumer nations who want prices held down and producing countries desiring high one for farm products.

Citation, Planned As Jest, Brings Tears to Halsey

From Yesterday's Late Editions

Aboard USS South Dakota, Off San Francisco, Oct. 15 (AP).—The one award which brought real tears to the eyes of Admiral Halsey was a citation which his staff conceived as a jest: "Order of the Japanese Sunset."

Rear Admiral Robert P. Carney, Halsey's chief of staff, recalled that when he presented the citation last August 16 in Tokyo Bay, tears came to the fleet commander's eyes.

"Well, anything I've done," Halsey said, "is because of you guys here. You did the work—I just sort of steered a course."

The citation: "For outstanding courage and personal leadership as commander of Task Force 8, commander of the South Pacific Force and commander of the Third Fleet during the period, 7 December, 1941, to 15 August, 1945."

Woman SS Guard Sobs When Girls Say She Was 'Kind'

From Yesterday's Late Editions

Lueneberg, Germany, Oct. 15 (AP).—A buxom 40-year-old SS (Elite Guard) woman, Herta Ehlert, broke down and sobbed today at the Belsen war crimes trial when two young German girls who had been prisoners at Ravensbruck concentration camp testified she had been "very kind."

Jutta and Inga Madlung testified they were sentenced to Ravensbruck for having Jewish friends, playing American records and making jokes about the Nazis such as this one on Germany's pork supply: "All the swine are in the Nazi party."

The defendant admitted she used to slap prisoners when they disobeyed, and commented, "I certainly did not caress them."

Truman Signs Ball For Soldier, First To Enter Tokyo

From Yesterday's Late Editions
By the Associated Press

Pfc. Paul F. Davis, Fairland, Okla., farmer who was the first American soldier to enter Tokyo, had President Truman autograph a baseball Monday. The ball had been hit into the stands in a World Series game at Chicago.

And he autographed a Japanese invasion note and handed it to the President.

"The President asked me how it felt to be the first serviceman to step into Tokyo," Davis told a reporter after his White House visit. "I told Mr. Truman it was just another day's work and that somebody had to be first."

Because he was first, Davis is to receive a $1000 prize by the Veterans of Foreign Wars of Ottawa County, Okla. The money will be paid him when he goes back to Miami, Okla., near his home, in about three weeks.

He was guest of honor at a luncheon given in the Capitol by Representative Schwabe (R., Okla.) and attended by Speaker Rayburn (D., Tex.); Majority Floor Leader McCormack (D., Mass.); other House leaders and Oklahoma members of Congress.

Manadru Captures Fourth Purse at Laurel

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

TRADE—The Athletics and Browns swapped first basemen yesterday and it couldn't have been more of an even-up deal if they had exchanged "good mornings." It was George McQuinn for Dick Siebert, and no two ballplayers were ever more of a type.

Povich

McQuinn and Siebert have been two of the better-fielding first basemen in the American League ever since they both came into the league in 1938. They have been the best at making the fancy first-to-second-to-first double play, and it was their specialty. They've both hit .300 on occasion, and they've both slumped into the .270's in other years.

Both of 'em hit that long ball, on occasion, too. Last season McQuinn made seven home runs, and Siebert's home run total was also seven. Neither of them are sprightly, except around the bag. In McQuinn, the Browns swapped a lame back for Siebert's two damaged knees.

It's been paining McQuinn to swing a bat for the last two years, and Siebert has been the victim of brittle knees. They're both strong, silent men. McQuinn, at his loudest, is soft-spoken. Siebert studied for the ministry, and has maintained a ministerial mien despite his big league surroundings.

WORLD SERIES—Buck O'Neill regaled the Touchdown Club yesterday with his stories of Andy Pafko's performance in the World Series. He likened the Cubs' young center fielder to Tris Speaker at his best, and declared Pafko would have been the series hero if the Cubs had won it.

O'Neill, however, gained the distinction of being the only World Series orator who in his enthusiastic retelling of the series, failed to mention the name of one Hank Greenberg, who played for the Detroits.

He made amends for that omission in a post-speech statement, however, when he said: "I forgot to say that the only time Pafko looked bad in center field was on those two balls Greenberg hit out of the park."

MORE WORLD SERIES—The two worst breaks of the series were suffered by the Tigers and Cubs in that 12-inning sixth game which the Cubs won, 8 to 7. The Cubs were forced to use up their pitching staff to win it, after Claude Passeau's pitching hand was damaged by Jimmy Outlaw's hot drive in the fifth inning, and thus had no fresh pitcher for the vital seventh game.

The Tigers' tough break occurred in the eighth inning when they tied the score but lost at least one more run when Charlie Hostetler fell on his face between third and home, and was run down and tagged out.

After the game that night, Pitcher Dizzy Trout of the Tigers was talking with friends in the Book-Cadillac Hotel, and mentioned casually that "my old man was at the game, today."

"Yeah," retorted one of his listeners, "I saw him rounding third base in the eighth."

FIGHT—When Joe Louis walked into Joe Jacobs office and signed a contract to defend his heavyweight title next June, the papers called for him to meet an opponent as yet unidentified. But on good authority the opponent is believed to be Billy Conn.

Mike Jacobs says the ringside seats will sell for $100, and just in case reconversion lags and the peepul don't have all the dough next June that they now possess, Jacobs will start selling those $100 seats to the June fight next month.

Without the radio and television rights, Jacobs foresees a three million dollar gate and Louis' end of that kind of gate receipts can be quickly calculated. As defending champion, he is entitled to 37½ per cent and that adds up to a neat $1,250,000 for one night's work.

If it is, indeed, a three million dollar gate, Louis will surpass the record "take" by Gene Tunney who dragged down a cool $990,000 as his share of the Dempsey-Tunney gate at Chicago in 1927. The big difference is, that Tunney's dough was comparatively tax exempt, in contrast to the present tax scale. Poor Conn, who is restricted to 12½ per cent, would be forced to work for the slavery wages of $375,000 that night, and it's not steady work.

'Mystery' Solved

Earl Audet's Play Caused Confusion in Redskin Game

By Al Costello
Post Staff Writer

That "mysterious" play that came up Sunday in the Redskin-Steeler game at Pittsburgh and which has caused a lot of wondering, not to mention a few arguments, was clarified yesterday following the showing of moving pictures of the game plus some diligent research of the rule book.

The setting was the fourth quarter, Redskins ball, fourth down on the Steeler 29-yard line. Sammy Baugh whipped a perfect pass to Frank Filchock in the end zone for what looked like a touchdown. But the ball was brought back, the Redskins penalized 15 yards back to the 44 and the Steelers given the ball.

Sports writers were mystified and so were Harry Wismer and Jim Gibbons, who broadcast the game. Jock Sutherland, ex-Pitt and Brooklyn Dodger coach, who was in the press box also had no inkling of what went on. No explanation came to the press box from the field.

What happened was this: Earl Audet, rookie Redskin tackle who will be an all-league tackle in a year or two unless a lot of alleged experts are off their trolleys, missed the signal and went down the field to throw a block into the Pittsburgh left halfback. Under the rues, Audet, an ineligible man, is not allowed downfield. Penalty is 15 yards plus loss of down. As it was fourth down, the Redskins had to give up the ball after the 15 yards were paced off. Referee Carl Rebee didn't miss the boat on that one. Rue seven, section five covers the play.

The Redskins yesterday buckled down to what is going to be one of their toughest weeks of practice as preparations for the invasion of the flashy and power-laden Philadelphia Eagles began. It is the Redskins' league championship opener on the home lot and even now, so early in the season, the game will have atremendous bearihg on the Eastern title.

They might do it again, which is why Coach Dud DeGroot and Line Mentor Turk Edwards are planning a lot of overtime work wtih the squad this week—to prevent it if possible.

Star of First Tech-Central Clash To See 45th Renewal

By Herb Heft

Seated among the 8000 fans who are expected to pack Central Stadium Saturday to watch the annual Central-Tech grid classic will be a man with a lot of memories.

But the 44 years that have elapsed since he sparked the Vikings to a 23-6 victory in that first Central-Tech game back in 1902 have failed to dim the enthusiasm of old Paul (Maggy) Magoffin, who returned to the local gridiron in 1912 to referee almost every subsequent Central-Tech contest 'til 1943, when he retired.

Just the other day, Maggy, who no longer admits his age, which must be about 62, was sitting around reminiscing on that first encounter between the bitter rivals, who just the year before had been part of the same team.

"Remember, Central and Tech didn't become separate schools until 1902, when we played the first game at the old American League ball park at 14th and H sts. ne. The feeling between the two teams was cordial, but we both wanted that game badly," he recalled, "and the stands were packed."

Coaches Were Mates

The rival coaches, the late Arba Tindall of Central and Gray Kennedy of Tech had played on the combination Central-Tech team in 1900, which only added to the tenseness of the struggle.

"We were all in fine shape because back in those days we had to be. Everything was done with brute strength since the forward pass had not yet been introduced. A team's ability to win depended on its ability to perform the revolving and mass wedge plays," he said.

"We kicked off to the Techites, and their fullback, Dick Senior, took the ball on his own 5-yard line and went through our whole team, 105 yards for a touchdown. No, my arithmetic isn't bad. In those days, the gridiron stretched 110 yards.

"Well, that giant Tech outfit kept the margin 'til halftime before we really got started and pushed over 23 points to win, 23-6. Incidentally, that game was called because of seven minutes before the regulation time required."

But what Magoffin was modest about describing were his twin touchdown runs of 50 and 45 yards, which accounted for 10 points in the last-hal Central rally. In those days a touchdown counted only five points.

"Yep, we did have a swell team that year," he reminisced. "Back

Army Again Far Ahead In Grid Poll

New York, Oct. 16 (AP).—Army, for the second straight week, dominated the Associated Press poll to determine the best college football team in the country by capturing 90 of the 105 votes.

The only other elevens to receive top nominations were Navy with 14 votes and Ohio State with 1.

The Cadets, with 1035 points, were followed by Navy (803), Notre Dame (768), Ohio State (655) and Minnesota (581), exactly the same as last week. Ten points were given for each first-place vote, 9 for second, 8 for third, etc. The 15 critics who did not place the West Pointers first voted the Cadets second.

The only two newcomers to this week's big ten are Pennsylvania and Purdue. The Quakers, by virtue of their 49-0 victory over North Carolina, jumped from eleventh place to seventh (310), while the Boilermakers hopped from fifteenth to ninth (184) on the strength of a 4-to-0 rout of Iowa.

Alabama moved up a notch from seventh to sixth (511) place while Indiana (292) and Texas (117) retained their respective eighth and tenth positions.

Southern California, absorbing a 33-to-6 lacing by the San Diego Naval outfit, dropped out of the first ten, skidding from last week's sixth-place rating to 14th place. Michigan, ninth in the previous listing, slid to 13th following its 28-to-7 defeat by Army.

Teams in the second ten were St. Mary's with 114 points, Georgia, 113; Michigan, 94; Southern California, 45; Oklahoma Aggies, 42; Duke, 40; Columbia, 27; Tulsa, 24; Holy Cross, 22 and Mississippi State, 18.

V. M. I. Furnishes Test for Indians

Williamsburg, Va., Oct. 16 (AP).—William and Mary will be out for its second Southern Conference victory when it meets Virginia Military Institute Saturday at Richmond.

The Indians looked impressive when they trampled Virginia Polytechnic Institute, 38-0, last week at Richmond, and while they will not have as one-sided a battle against the Cadets, should make it two in a row in the Richmond meeting this week.

Coach Rube McCray has a versatile and strong backfield combination in Tommy Korczowski, Stan Madgziak, Chet Mackiewicz, Nick Forkovitch, Bob Piefki and Freshman Dixie Walker and Jack Hoey, and an almost impregnable front line.

The eight squadron, however, are not to be taken too lightly, especially after their win over North Carolina State.

Perfection Record Compiled by Herber

New York, Oct. 16 (AP).—It will take nothing less than perfection for Arnie Herber to maintain his present National Football League passing pace against Pittsburgh next Sunday. The veteran New York Giants pitching ace has completed nine out of nine passes, four of them scoring plays, in league tilts against Pittsburgh and Boston.

USGA Names Courses for Title Meets

By Harold Claasen

New York, Oct. 16 (AP).—Amateur golfers will determine their 1946 champion over one of the two Baltusrol courses, Springfield, N. J., in September and the Open title will be decided over the Canterbury layout at Cleveland in June, the U. S. Golf Association announced today.

At the same time the golf leaders said the public links crown would be put up for decision at the Wellshire Club in Denver, July 22 to 27, and that if Great Britain sent over a Walker Cup team the matches would be played at Southampton, Long Island, August 30 and 31.

No dates nor site was set for the Women's National tourney.

The executive committee of the USGA, which recently approved the return of tburney play after a four-year hiatus because of the war, met last Wednesday but would not reveal the locations of the meets until the host clubs had been notified by mail.

Amateurs Set

The amateur club swingers will meet at Baltusrol, site of the 1936 open, from September 9 to 14 in their search for a successor to Marvin (Bud) Ward of Spokane, Wash., who won the 1941 crown at Omaha, Nebr., by defeating Ray Abbott, Hollywood extra, 4 and 3 in the final round. Both later joined the armed forces.

Craig Wood of Mamaroneck, N. Y., taped up his throbbing back to score a 73-71-70-70—284 for the 1941 open crown at the Colonial Club, Fort Worth, Tex. He recently resigned as the Winged Foot Club pro to enter business but indicated he would play tournament golf. Denny Shute, now an Arkansas City, Kans., farmer, was second at 287.

The open is carded for June 13 to 15 over the same terrain where Lawson Little and Gene Sarazen tied for the 1940 title. Little won by three strokes in an 18-hole playoff.

Welch Champion

William J. Welch, jr. of Houston, Tex., is the present champion of the public links division, having defeated Jack Kerns of Denver, 6 and 5, in the 1941 final at Spokane, Wash.

When tournaments were dropped for the duration soon after Pearl Harbor the sites for the 1942 contests already had been named with the open assigned to Minneapolis, the amateur to Del Monte, Calif., and the public links to Denver.

In its announcement today the executive committee told equipment manufacturers that the balls and clubs should be made under the same regulations as those in effect in 1941.

Thomason Returns To V. M. I. Squad

Lexington, Va., Oct. 16 (AP).—Bob Thomason, VMI halfback, returning from a spell on the injury bench, limbered up his passing arm today as the Cadets prepared for their Saturday meeting at Richmond with William and Mary. Thomason made repeated "scores" into the arms of Bobby Noftsinger, Richmond end, and his running mate in the passing attack.

Thomason also drew comment from Coach Pooley Hubert on his running, the Leeds, Ala., flash and mainstay of the Cadet backfield, getting off several long runs.

Hubert also praised the work of Bill Hawkins, another Richmonder, who did a fine job against North Carolina State last Saturday as blocking back after Billy Barnett had been shifted to wingback.

Eastern Shore Clubs Meet to Form League

Salisbury, Md., Oct. 16 (AP).—Representatives from several Delmarva towns will meet at Snow Hill Friday to organize an amateur basketball league for the lower shore area.

Five clubs, Crisfield, Westover Army Camp, Pocomoke City State Guard, Berlin and Snow Hill, have promised to send delegates. Others interested are Salisbury, St. Francis De Sales Church of Salisbury, the Salisbury State Teachers College and Chincoteague (Va) Navy Auxiliary Air Station.

Ex-Cornell Gridmen Reunited at Luncheon

While Congressman Frank L. Sunstrom of New Jersey holds a football it is autographed by Lieut. Col. George Pfann, USA, at yesterday's luncheon of the Touchdown Club. The two men, star teammates on Cornell University grid teams of a few years ago, were guest speakers.

A's and Browns Swap Seibert And McQuinn

Philadelphia, Oct. 16 (AP).—Dick Siebert, first baseman for the Philadelphia Athletics for the last eight years, was traded to the St. Louis Browns today for George McQuinn, first sacker for the Brownies for the same length of time.

It was a straight swap, no money being involved, Manager Connie Mack of the Athletics said.

"Both Bill DeWitt, business manager of the Bronws, and I thought a change would do our clubs a lot of good and these players, too," Mack said. "Both have been with us for many years. That was the only thought we had in mind in making the trade."

Others on Block

Mack had stated earlier a number of Athletics players, including Siebert, Shortstop Eddie Busch and possibly Outfielder Bobby Estalella would go on the trading block.

In St. Louis, DeWitt said the trade was the first of several the Browns planned in an effort to strengthen the club for the 1946 season. He said Outfielder Joe Grace would be discharged from the Navy today.

McQuinn whot at 34 is thre years older than Siebert, was a stalwart performer for the Browns. He led in hitting in the -944 World Series with a .438 average.

Sixty Tallies In

This year he batted .277, batting in 60 runs. Siebert clubbed .268, knocking across 51 tallies.

Mack said he didn't know Siebert was three years younger than McQuinn. "But that's all right. Both men are in their prime with several more years of good baseball in them."

It will be Siebert's second appearance in St. Louis. The Cardinals took him from Indiapolis in the American Association in 1937 and 1938, each time sending him back to the Columbus club.

The Macks got him from Columbus during the 1938 season.

McQuinn was drafted by the Browns from Newark in the International League at the end of the 193 7season, and immediately stepped into the first base job, playing a sa regular ever since.

Va. Schools Fight For First Place

Winchester, Va., Oct. 16—Stonewall and Berryville high school football teams will battle it out for first place Friday in the Valley Athletic League.

Stonewall took a rough game from Strasburg, 26-19; while Berryville romped over Hedgesville, 49-0, last week, to keep their records clean. The two are tied for first place with three wins each.

Boyce High defeated Stephens City, 39-19, to move into third place in the loop standing.

In addition to the Stonewall-Berryville game, other contests scheduled this week are Boyce at Hedgesville and Strasburg at Stephens City.

Virginia Tech Tries for First Conference Win Against Terps

Richmond, Va., Oct. 16 (AP).— Virginia Tech's Gobblers are suspicious about the big "welcome" on that Southern Conference mat. Twice this season that mat has been deftly pulled from under their feet.

The Techmen, returned to the Southern Conference fold this season after an absence of two years, were greeted with anything but politeness. North Carolina was the first to spill the Gobblers 14-0.

In their second game Coach Macauley McEver's boys were bounced 38-0 by William and Mary. Next Saturday the Gobblers will be knocking at the door for the third time—and undefeated Maryland is slated to answer at Blacksburg.

Bushkar Back in Lineup

Harry Bushkar, the Gobblers' key back who was absent from the William and Mary game because of a rib injury, is expected to be back in the lineup against the high-powered Terrapins from College Park, Md. But it probably will take more than Bushkar to tip the scales in favor of the Gobblers.

The Terrapins, largely through the efforts of Fullback Hammerin' Hank Bonk, have bounce in order Guilford, 60-6, Richmond 21-0 and Merchant Marine Academy 22-6. In the three games Bonk tallied 31 points to help along the Maryland squad which includes a dozen or so players from North Carolina Preflight.

Out of 23 games between the two schools, Maryland has 12 wins. In 1897—the year the series started—Tech won, 18-4. In 1936 when the two schools last played, Maryland carried off the honors, 6-0.

N. C. State Vs. Wake Forest

Two other conference games are slated for Saturday. Thrice beaten North Carolina State plays Wake Forest in a night game at Raleigh, N. C., and Virginia Military Institute meets William and Mary at Richmond.

North Carolina State found the going too rough after an opening 47-12 win over Milligan and was bumped by Virginia, Clemson and VMI in that order. The Deacons will be meeting their weakest opponent of the season. After an opening 7-6 loss to Tennessee, Wake Forest was smothered by Army, 54-0, and last week lost to Duke, 26-19. The Wolfpack in all probability will provide Coach D. C. (Peahead) Walker's boys with the pass to the win column.

VMI, with high-scoring Bob Thomason and Lynn Chewning, will lay its record of three wins and one loss on the line against William and Mary's Indians, conquerors of Catawba and PI and losers to Tennessee.

Md. Title Cup Shoot To Be Held Sunday

Hagerstown, Md., Oct. 16.—A championship cup shoot will be held at the Conococheague Sportsmen Clubhouse on the Potomac Sunday afternoon, October 21.

Shooters from Hagerstown, Cumberland, Frederick and Hancock are expected to attend the affair.

Hunch Bet Nets Worker $8000 Double

Salem, N. H., Oct. 16 (AP).—A Boston Navy Yard worker collected $8,614.40—second highest daily double payoff in American race track history—today on a hunch bet he made at Rockingham Race Track.

Martin Rush, of Boston, the first of the three winners to cash his winning ticket, said that he is being laid off from his Navy Yard job next week.

"It is mighty tough to be detached from a job," Rush said, and that's why he picked two long shots, "Mighty Tough" and "Detach" for his $2 bet on the double.

Mighty Tough was a 45-1 shot, but won the photo finish first race, paying $91.80.

Detach, which went to the post at 80-to-one, came in two lengths ahead and paid $162.60.

The two combined for a double payoff which is topped only by payment of $10,772.40 on Joy Bet and Merry Caroline at Washington Park, Chicago on August 14, 1939.

Names of the other two winners were not available.

Jack Dempsey Enters Hospital For Checkup

Rip Miller Predicts Bright Grid Future For Colleges, Pros

The future of football is rosier than ever before, it was predicted yesterday by Navy Line Coach E. E. (Rip) Miller at the weekly breakfast meeting of the Earl Birds Club at the Willard Hotel.

The veteran Annapolis mentor said the grid game now faces its greatest boom with the discharge of thousands of combat veterans from the armed forces. And football, he said, will become the greatest conditioner of the Nation's young men.

Miller also predicted (1) at least one professional football league besides the National League will be highly successful and (2) colleges will soon cease their hush-hush tactics in obtaining good grid material.

By Walter Haight
Post Staff Writer

Laurel, Md., Oct. 16.—W. L. Brann's Manadru, an honest racing son of Challenger II, won his fourth purse of the meeting here, coming through with a thrilling head decision over P. A. B. Widener's Concordian in the best offering on the Tuesday program. A crowd of 11,000 enjoying the sport with conditions at their best, saw the test of a mile and 70 yards in which K. A. O'Conner's Statesman was third. A field of ten competed and the winner registered time of 1:44 4/5 while operating in the role of a $4.80 favorite.

Ridden by Jockey A. Snellings, Manadru was rated along in fourth position as Magnetic Star set the pace followed by Statesman and Concordian. The quartet stayed in this order almost to the stretch and then ganged up, four abreast, across the track. Magnetic Star and Concordian were in the middle. Canadru on the outside was placed to the whip after Concordian took a slight led and came on to be up in the concluding strides.

Silver Run Scores

Mrs. J. Sturgeon's Silver Run was an easy winner and a joy to the favorite players in the third event, the day's steeplechase. The son of Gino took command when urged by Jockey Owen and coasted to the wire six lengths in advance of Mrs. M. Seidt's Forest Ranger with Edgar Horn's Bar Ship third. Bar Ship pulled up lame after the running. The winner paid $3.70 and was clocked in 4:01 for the about two miles over 13 fences.

J. McHenry's Aralak, well played at an $8.10 mutuel, won the first race in a thrilling blanket finish. He closed a neck in advance of H. Schaeffer's Woodscott, a long shot, who headed F. Carberry, sr's Farmer's Girl out of second money. A field of a dozen maiden 3 and 4-year-olds competed in the test of six furlongs. Aralak was ridden capably by Jocky M. Basile and was cloced in 1:15 3/5.

The daughter of Carrier Pigeon, ridden by Jockey D. Dodson finished three lengths in front of the closest opposition, Mrs. D. K. Kerr's Hug Bug. A length and a half further back came M. Prickett's M. Longeine to be third. The winner was in front early and was not seriously threatened after shaking off Hug Bug. Fast Feather paid $7.40 completed a $42.60 daily double and was clocked in 1:15 2/5.

Bee Bee, Henry, Abrams, Named In Ring Ratings

Tommy (Rocky) Graziano, dynamite-fisted New York middleweight, made the most rapid rise of the year, according to the first postwar quarterly ratings revealed today by President Abe J. Greene of the National Boxing Association.

Washington's Yancey Henry and Bee Bee Washington were listed as "honorable mention" in the heavyweight and middleweight divisions, respectively.

Georgie Abrams was placed in the logical contender class for middleweight honors.

Heavyweight Champion Joe Louis, Lightheavyweight King Gus Lesnevich and Tony Zale, middleweight titleholder, were given a full period of respite from title defense because of their recent discharges from military service, but Middleweight Champion Cochrane, Lightweight Champion Ike Williams and Bantamweight Boss Manuel Ortiz were ordered to prepare to take on high-ranking foes.

Ohio State Guard Named 'Lineman of Week'

By Ted Meier

New York, Oct. 16 (AP).—Warren Amling, 198-pound guard of Ohio State's undefeated, untied Buckeyes, today won this week's award as the football lineman of the week. Dick Scott, Navy center, won the honors last week in the first Associated Press poll of the season.

Amling drew praise not only from Midwest sports writers and his coach, Carroll Widdoes, but from Harry Stuhldreher, mentor of the Wisconsin Badgers beaten by the Buckeyes, 12-0.

"That Amling," said Harry, who ought to know. "What a football player he is."

Amling played 59 minutes of the game and his side of the line was "absolutely impregnable," according to Paul Hornung of the Columbus Dispatch.

"He is the finest lineman I've seen all season," Widdoes remarked while Bill Hackett, the Buckeyes' all-America tackle last year who is permanently sidelined by injuries, declared: "Amling is greater now than I ever hoped to be."

Leon Bramlett, Navy end, was signaled out by many sports scribes, but he Midshipmen coach, Comdr. Oscar Hagberg, asserted Guard Jim Carrington "was our outstanding lineman against Penn State. While Bramlett was brilliant, I rate Carrington's performance as tops. He turned in a whale of a game and his offensive and defensive blocking was superb."

Ernest "Bear" Knotts, Duke guard, was the fifth man in Wake Forest's backfield all afternoon while another guard, John Cloiteaux, playing his first varsity game, helped Baylor upset Arkansas by intercepting three forward passes.

Jack Dieringer, Nevada tackle, broke through repeatedly to smear players by the Santa Barbara Marines in the last quarter to help Navada to an upset 19-14 victory. Hubert Bechtol, Texas' All-America end from last year, caught seven forward passes for 97 yards and was "terrific on defense" in beating Okahoma, 12-7.

Centers Neil Zundel of Princeton, Frank Sniadak of Columbia and Harold Watts of Michigan, all received pats on the back for their sterling performances against Cornell, Yale and Army, respectively.

George Munger, University of Pennsylvania coach, termed his 17-year-old end, Bob Sponaugle, the "best lineman in my bunch of kids" while Jim Callanan, Southern California wingman, was the "only lineman who played up to his game" against San Diego Navy. Marion Iterson, UCLA guard, "stopped California plays cold."

Leavenworth Captures 'Cap At Jamaica

Jamaica Race Track, N. Y., Oct. 16 (AP).—Although today's program was stakeless and featured Class D horses, a number of unsual angles popped up to command more than passing interest from a crowd of 23,938. Such as the fact that in the first half of the divided Hedgewood Handicap, the six sprinters engaged finished in exactly the order their odds would indicate, with Herbert M. Woolf's Leavenworth the victor.

The $4.90 favorite, making his local score two for two since a successful campaign in Chicago, scored by three lengths over Greentree's Tambo, with Mrs. A. J. Abel's Gramps Image, third, two additional lengths away. Then came Alison Peters, Skin Deep and Freezeout as named to complete the rare situation of the talent picking the finish perfectly.

Leavenworth put Freezeout away afte ra half mile, then drew out with ease in 1:11 4/5 for the six furlongs.

Jockey Ted Atkinson's return to winning form after going 17 straight races without a victory. He won his second race on the card astride Leavenworth.

The victory of C. V. Whitney's juvenile Blue Falcon in the fourth event after seven disappointments. This gray son of Mahmound—Top Flight is the youngster for which his owner refused $100,000 from William Helis when the colt was a yearling. Blue Falcon may yet prove worth that much; he again was flighty in the paddock and still may have much to learn. It was the first time juveniles had been asked to cover a mile and a sixteenth this season. Blue Falcon has now won a grand total of $2325 in eight starts.

Hi Marietta, a three-year-old filly whose previous races had been dismal, won the third contest at odds of 59 to 1.

Dartaway, a $5200 plater, had to be destroyed after breaking down badly during the second race.

Leg Hurt, Busher Scratched as Hollywood Entry

Inglewood, Calif., Oct. 16 (AP).—Busher, three-year-old queen filly from L. B. Mayer's stable, injured her leg today and will not run in the $75,000 Hollywood Gold Cup Races at Hollywood Park Saturday, her trainer, George Odom, announced.

It is doubtful, Odom added, whether the little filly which ranks seventh in all-time money winners, will be able to race again before next year. Her winnings so far amount to $334,035.

Odom said that Busher did a seven furlong workout this morning in 1:27 and later developed a bad filling in her left leg down to the ankle. The swelling was reduced somewhat but Odom said no chances would be taken until it was definitely indicated the injury was not serious.

A larger field is expected to face the barriers Saturday with Busher out of contention.

Following an examination, Dr. J. E. Peters, veterinarian, said Busher had wrenched an outside suspensory ligament but apparently had suffered no bone injury.

Young Widow Loves Soldier With Broken Back, Who Refuses to Marry Her Because Of It; Is There Way to Change His Mind?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: My husband was killed in action a year ago. I have a baby just a year old. I have fallen in love again—with a very swell guy who is, however, very stubborn. He broke his back overseas and has just recently been discharged. His accident overseas affected his heart and doctors tell him that he has from 5 to 10 years to live.

He loves me and wants to marry me and I feel the same about him. I want to be his wife more than anything now, but he refuses to marry me. He says it wouldn't be fair, in view of the fact that he won't live long. However, I am willing to take the chance, because I love him and want to be with him until the end. And doctors are not always right. But I cannot make him see my side.

Don't you think that so long as we love each other and want to be married, that we should go ahead and forget what the doctors told him? If I am willing to take the chance, don't you think he should be willing also? Please tell me what to do. F. M.

Man Has Rights, Despite Injury

DEAR F. M.: To paraphrase Robert Burns, "A man with a broken back is the same man for a' that." So don't let your soldier's wartime injury blind you to the fact that he is an adult with a mind of his own, entitled to decide for himself whether or not he ought to marry. In my opinion he will be better off unmarried, if that is the way he feels about it.

In his condition, it is understandable that he may shrink involuntarily from the weight of responsibilities that marriage brings, to tax mind, nerves and body alike. And while in a way it is sweet of you to clamor so vigorously for his consent to marriage, and to rate his handicap as no impediment to happiness, if mutual love be present, nevertheless I think your insistence is more selfish than truly devotional.

There is a saying, "Desire knows no conscience." And I sense a possibility that you—in buoyant health, ardently wanting married love and strongly attracted by this man's personality—are primarily concerned to immediately satisfy a personal want, and essentially indifferent to his prophetic decision, apologetically argued, that he cannot qualify as a family man. Which is to say, indifferent to his present or future peace of mind; wholly engrossed in trying to please yourself; willing to let the chips fall where they may.

Seems to Love Freedom Most

ALSO, it occurs to me that if you really were a compatible couple, so that "a marriage of true minds" would be in the cards, there would be no conflict of opinion on this all-important subject. Rather, you would find yourselves in spontaneous agreement, when considering ways and means of doing most good for each other.

Lastly, I believe that if the soldier fully reciprocated your fervent interest, he would gratefully embrace your flattering offer to marry and defy fate and the doctors. His obstinate refusal suggests to me that much as he likes you, he likes freedom even more. And if you say, "But he brought up the subject," then I say, "He never meant you to take it so seriously." My advice is: Concede defeat. Accept his decision and let him go out of your life. M. H.

Town Talk—

Mrs. Robbins to Witness Star Presentation; Georgetown Will Acquire Pet Lamb Soon

By Eva Hinton

MRS. Warren Delano Robbins has gone to New York for a few days' visit with her family and to be a guest at the presentation of the Bronze Star awarded posthumously to her son, Capt. Edward Hutchinson Robbins of the Army Air Corps.

Before volunteering for the Army, Captain Robbins was an assistant to the Coordinator of Inter-American Affairs stationed in Washington. He and his charming wife, a granddaughter of Col. Edward M. House, World War I adviser to President Woodrow Wilson, were one of the most popular younger couples in the Capital.

Captain Robbins' 5-year-old son and namesake will accept his father's decoration Friday at Mitchel Field. The decoration was awarded for "meritorious service in support of combat" and for his fine liaison work with the United States and French Air Forces.

Captain Robbins was lost over the Mediterranean a year ago last June on a flying mission which, to the profound sorrow of all who knew him, is listed by the War Department as "incomplete."

GEORGETOWN is going to have a pet baby lamb just any day now. Actually the pet will belong to the David Bruces!

I say "Georgetown" because sooner or later almost everything in Georgetown, from a party to a pet, takes on a community aspect whether you wish or not.

The lamb is the gift of Mrs. Altemus Whitney from her place in Virginia and it is planned his work will be to keep the Bruces' lawn neatly cropped.

The Bruces have just done over their garden literally from the ground up, and their grass looks like nothing as much as the down on a youth's cheek before his first shave (it's a different color, of course). So I hardly think that "cropping" is just what it needs at the moment.

ONCE upon a time there was a pretty little girl with dark curls and soft, dark eyes. Her name was Abigail Gluck, and she roomed across the hall from my sister and myself at boarding school.

Abigail's mother was gentle and beautiful Alma Gluck, the singer. When she came to see her small daughter, we children would gather around her chair and beg for song after song and she never refused us.

It meant more to us kids than lovely music and a serene smile. We were all homesick and Mme. Gluck brought us a glimpse of our own mothers.

But, between her mother's visits, Abigail was brutalized by her roommates till even matter-of-fact little girls like my sister and myself could stand it no longer.

The ultimate cruelty came the day they put her doll and her hairbrush in a pitcher of water.

We asked to have Abigail moved into our room, where we lived in peace till our own parents gave in to our homesickness and took us home.

Years later I met Abigail again! And many other Washingtonians met her the other day at a gay party given for her by the First Secretary of the Czechoslovak Embassy and Mme. Palic.

She is Marcia Davenport, the brilliant author. She told me once, quite frankly, that a numerologist had advised her change of name to Marcia and that it had made all the difference in her life.

Of course it was equally brilliant Russell Davenport who saw to it that she changed her name to Mrs. Davenport.

The Gentler Sex

Should Japanese Women Vote?

"Well, I'm for democracy as much as anyone, but I can't see this thing of giving Japanese women the vote. They won't know what it's about."

"But the Japanese men are being given the vote——"

"That's different. The women have always been kept down and oppressed."

"So have the great masses of men—the peasants and workers. But giving them a voice in what's going on may arouse them to change things."

"The women will vote as they're told."

"Possibly so, in this first midwinter election. So will most of the men. But they'll at least learn they can vote."

"They'll probably be too hungry to think much about voting."

"True—and I'll hope we over here will have sense enough and humanity enough to try to help that situation. But these ignorant, undernourished people may also begin to wonder why they've been brought to the state they're in, and why they've had to exist in the past on a few cups of rice a day. The women especially, who in spite of constant childbearing, do so much of the hard labor in factory and field may get the urge to better themselves now that they have a tool to do it with."

"BUT they'll be completely used by unscrupulous leaders with big promises."

"The can even happen here. And don't forget there are some up and coming Japanese women leaders. Returned missionaries tell of the intelligence and zeal of these women and how capable they would be if their hands were not tied by law and custom. Did you know that from 1928 on to the beginning of the last war there was a woman's organization in Tokyo that belonged to the General Federation of Women's Clubs and that cooperated as far as it was able in the federation's projects."

"I still think it's dangerous to give the power of the vote to a great mass of ignorant women."

"And men also—please remember. But whatever they do, could it be any worse than their former slavery to the Japanese military and economic clique?"

"After all, American women had to work for 75 years to get the ballot."

"Is that anything for this Nation to be proud of? The world's moving too fast now to wait 75 years for any basic social reform. At least two groups of American women, the American Association of University Women and the National League of Women Voters, urged the State Department to include Japanese women in the suffrage decree. Certainly no women on earth were more in need of some token of encouragement and deliverance. Even in peace 60 per cent of all Japanese factory workers are women. One-fifth of these are children between 10 and 15. Eighty thousand women work in the coal mines. A woman's wages go to her father or her husband. After marriage she has no identity, is completely subject to her husband and can be cast off by him if she does not have male children."

"I know, but will they have nerve enough to do anything about their plight?"

"Probably not right away. But it will start them thinking. Anyway, American authorities could do no less than insist on this symbol of freedom being given to women as well as men. It's a gesture, not only to Japan, but to the world of what our democracy stands for. It also ought to be a good jolt to Nazis and Fascists everywhere."

"Well I hope something will come of it."

"Give the Japanese women time—and a chance. Look at China. Haven't the women there stepped out of seclusion in a big way since the republic was established? Look at women in Mexico, South America, France. All over the world they're on the march. It's all part of the inevitable—though often slow—advance of human freedom. Because it's hit the Japanese women like a thunderbolt there may be confusion and mistakes for awhile. But in the end it'll work to the good."

"But if only they could have been a little more ready——"

"Yes, and if only we in America—and the world—could have been a little more ready mentally and morally for the atom bomb! The next century has been born ahead of time everywhere. There's nothing for ourselves, and the Japanese women as well, but to do our best to catch up with it."

Price of Carelessness

The Hamilton National Bank revealed last night that nearly 1250 stock purchase warrants were voider Monday at noon because they had not been exercised. The warrants ended at about $8 each and therefore holders lost $10,000 in hard cash. Since the expiration date of the rights had been amply reported through the news columns and advertisements; this waste was solely the fault of careless investors. However between 94 and 95 per cent of investors in Hamilton stock took advantage of the "melon" according to President W. J. Waller.
